Full Economic Treaty With Russia Looms

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

LENINGRAD — A full-fledged treaty on economic development, technological and industrial cooperation between Russia and Canada may be forthcoming.

A joint communique issued after Prime Minister Trudeau had left the Soviet Union for Ottawa revealed both are running hard to reach further milestones of co-operation in record time.

And Trudeau today joined with the Russians in calling for a reduction of armed forces in central Europe and also sided with the Soviet plan for a European security conference.

Similar to One With Finland

Leading the list of new links projected by the communique for earnest discussion in the weeks and months ahead is the Russian treaty proposal, similar to the one Moscow has with Finland.

"The Canadian side agreed to study the proposal," the communique said.

The two governments also have agreed to work together more in developing the Arctic region and declared they both "have special responsibilities and corresponding rights" of ensuring safe navigation and preservation of the ecology in the Arctic Ocean.

The communique also ranged over a number of international problems with both sides supporting a "properly prepared conference on European security" to include Canada and the United States. Both sides placed themselves on record as supporting a reduction of armed forces in central Europe.

Communique 'Plain-Spoken'

By co-incidence, the seven-page communique was hammered out in this city which Peter the Great built as Czarist Russia's "Window of the West."

An unusually plain-spoken communique by cold war standards, most of the tough details were worked out by under-secretary of state for external affairs A. E. Ritchie and Russia's deputy foreign minister S. P. Kosyrev. An even stronger version was sought by the Soviets but the Canadian side insisted on moderating some of the full-some language they sought.

The communique was to be tabled in the Commons this morning and announced simultaneously in Moscow, while Trudeau's armed forces jetliner was nearing the Canadian coast.

It referred to the "hearty welcome" shown Trudeau and his wife everywhere he went while logging 15,000 miles inside Russia since his arrival 11 days ago and said the atmosphere of "frankness and cordiality — in his talks with Kremlin leaders had led to the protocol they signed unexpectedly last week" to enlarge and deepen consultations," on a periodic basis at the government, commercial, scientific, cultural and tourist levels.

Safeguards Universal Peace

"They are convinced that the further development of good neighborly relations corresponds to the national interests of the peoples of Canada and the Soviet Union and promotes the relaxation of international tension and the safeguarding of universal peace," the joint statement said.

But it also included news of further developments since the protocol signing:

● Russia's proposal for a treaty on economic, technological and industrial co-operation which would go much further than the agreement signed by industry, trade and commerce minister Pepin in Moscow four months ago providing for co-operation in exchanging industrial applications of science and technology.

● Instructions to bureaucrats have been given by both to figure out the mechanics of "further developing trade relations between the two countries" and begin re-negotiating current trade arrangements this November or December in Moscow.

● Instructions to the experts to study ways of "further expanding co-operation in the field of air transport" which sources indicated would involve improvements in the present twice-weekly Aeroflot and

House Bypassed, Says Opposition

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Conservative party today presented a motion to censure the government for not bringing before Parliament the Canada-Russia protocol signed in Moscow by Prime Minister Trudeau.

The prime minister and his wife returned to Ottawa this morning from his 11-day tour and immediately went to Parliament to report on his visit.

However, debate on the censure motion was the first item of business today.

Conservative foreign affairs spokesman Heath Macquarrie attacked the prime minister as the "number one tourist of the year."

Macquarrie said there is no doubt Trudeau wants to escape national problems by travelling abroad.

The debate continued this afternoon.

Trudeau said at the airport he had not heard of criticism about the length of his stay in Russia or alleged anti-American talks.

The censure motion reads: "This House regrets the refusal of the government to bring before the House for consideration and decision the U.S.S.R.-Canada protocol in order that all aspects of the relationship can be considered before implementation."

The motion, which under House rules does not come to a vote, follows an exchange in the Commons Wednesday in which External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told Gerald W. Baldwin, the Conservative House leader, the opposition could bring the protocol before the House on one of the days on which it chooses the subject for debate, normally a government prerogative.

External Affairs Minister Sharp said the protocol will help the two countries discuss the problems in their relations.

Similar agreements existed between Canada and the United States, Japan, Mexico, France, Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Tunisia.

None of these agreements, Mr. Sharp said, was submitted to Parliament before it was made. He noted that the agreement with Japan was made in 1961 by the Conservative government of John Diefenbaker.

PRICE CONTROLS 'EMERGENCY ONLY'

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Edgar Benson indicated in the Commons today that only in a state of emergency would the federal government impose mandatory wage and price controls.

Benson was asked if emergency controls were necessary would they be distributed to the provinces and tabled in the house. Benson said if an emergency dictates their use they would not be announced in advance.

Causeway to Be Jammed For Swiftsure Eve Party

By PAT DUFOUR

The massing of the largest Swiffsure fleet in history — 191 boats — and a variety of on-shore activities will make the Inner Harbor the pivot of events this evening with a record crowd of thousands jammed along the Causeway.

Pre-race fever will burn to a pitch at 8:15 p.m. as Humphrey Golby, Mr. Swiftsure, reels off the rollcall of boats and the competitors hail back with horns, ship's bells and anything else on hand.

The band and guard of the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps will perform a Sunset Ceremony on the legislative lawns, dressed in white tropical uniforms. Their field-gun crew will add a little extra fillip to the proceedings.

When the rollcall is over — about 9:15 p.m. — there will be a Victorian Days costume parade along the Causeway.

PARADE OPEN

The parade is open to everyone and will offer first and second-place prizes for the best-dressed man, woman, couple, children under 12 years of age, girls under 12 and boys under 12.

The race itself, which begins off Brotchie Ledge Saturday with the Swiftsure boats getting their start gun at 9:30 a.m. and the Juan de Fuca racers starting 15 minutes later, is expected to be one of the best recorded.

Winds will be light at the start, building up to westerlies between 10 and 15 knots as the boats head up the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The action is expected to quicken as squally conditions develop in the afternoon, working up to westerlies ranging from 25 to 30 knots.

Onshore watchers can expect a colorful finale as the boats head back to the finish line at the Breakwater Sunday. Pushed home by the westerlies, the armada will be flying a milti-colored host of spinnakers.

Heavy traffic in the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the possibility of fog patches Saturday will add a hazard of their own.

Frank Piddington of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, who is race chairman for the fourth consecutive year, warns that the competitors should be on the alert for boats.

LIQUOR PRICE HIKE LOOMS

Rumors of an impending liquor price increase by the provincial government are flying today.

Premier and Finance Minister W.A.C. Bennett, asked to deny the rumors, said today that it is a matter for Attorney-General Leslie Peterson who is responsible for the liquor control board.

Peterson could not immediately be reached for comment.

William Bruce, liquor control board chairman, said he has received no notification from the provincial cabinet to authorize any increases.

According to persistent reports, the increase would take effect next week, possibly with the opening of liquor stores on Tuesday, June 1.

Among rumored increases are an across-the board five per cent increase, but other predictions include a decrease in the price of some products.

Pressure for an increase in alcoholic products is believed to have mounted following the imposition of a five-cent a pack tax on cigarettes and tobacco products during the last legislative session.

B.C. prices for Canadian whisky are among the lowest in Canada, if not the lowest.

Alberta revised its liquor prices, effective Tuesday, increasing the prices of some brands by five and ten cents. Increases by manufacturers are given as reasons.

Socreds 'Attack' Unions, Youth

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — New Democrat Party leader Dave Barrett today attacked the Social Credit government for creating a campaign of "hate and hostility" among British Columbians.

In a speech to the NDP convention at the University of British Columbia's Totem Park convention centre Barrett said the Socreds stay in power by dividing provincial citizens. He said the government has attacked teachers, unions, and recently, working people and professional groups as troublemakers.

Then he singled out Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi as the government member who has launched the most recent hostility campaign.

"That minister has now deliberately taken on the youth of this country and specially the youth of this province."

This is the government's latest response to unemployment, Barrett said. Instead of

CORONA FAMILY JUST CAN'T BELIEVE . . .

'Monster' Mass Slayer or Model Husband?

By GEORGE LARDNER

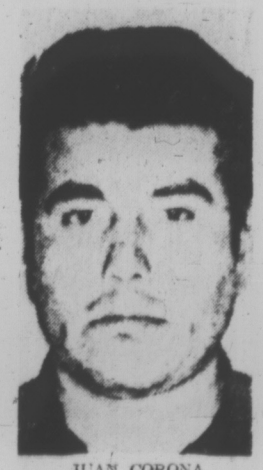
YUBA CITY, Calif. (WP) — Gloria Corona was still stunned by the predawn raid that tumbled her family out of bed and her husband into jail Wednesday morning.

Now she was alone, among friends, but alone. And Juan Vallejo Corona, the man she had married 12 years ago, the father of her four young daughters, was locked up on charges of mass murder suspected of killing at least 20 men and burying them along the banks of the Feather River here.

"My little girl, Marta, woke up because they were putting flashlights in all the rooms," Mrs. Corona recalled. "The police gave Juan a warning . . . about his rights. But he was shocked. He was in his underclothes. He couldn't understand."

Deputies from the Sutter County sheriff's office, one of them armed with a carbine, began reading out some of the accusations against her husband, Mrs. Corona said. But, she said, they failed to make an impression. Although Corona moved here from the Mexican town of Autlan Jalisco about 15 years ago, he is not yet fluent in English.

"He said maybe his daughter could read it all out for him," Mrs. Corona said, tears swelling up in her eyes. Fortunately, friends around her added, the officers told Corona that that would not be appropriate.



JUAN CORONA
. . . he doesn't understand

A short woman with a round face and deep brown eyes, Gloria Corona spoke rapidly in Spanish, her words translated by a friend, Frank Vega, and an interpreter that two newsmen had brought along in hopes of interviewing her briefly. They found her at a farm labor camp just north of town that is run by one of her husband's seven brothers, Pedro Corona, 35. It was close to midnight Wednesday night, but Mrs. Corona wasn't sleepy. Nor had she eaten all day.

FAMILY MAN

To Pedro Corona, his older brother is a good family man, a good Catholic, "the best brother I have because he takes care of my mother, sends her more money than anybody else."

MURDER TOLL 20

YUBA CITY, Calif. (CP) — Eight more bodies of murder victims have been dug up in fruit orchards near here, bringing to 20 the number found along the Feather River, law enforcement officers said.

The latest discoveries made this the largest multiple murder case in modern American history.

Isolated in a Yuba City jail and charged with the murders is Juan V. Corona, 37, of Yuba City, who spent three months in a state mental hospital in 1956.

There still was no apparent motive for the macabre slayings.

Russia 'Abandons' Ousted Friends

CAIRO (CP) — The Soviet Union and Egypt signed a 15-year treaty of friendship and co-operation Thursday night, renewing their close alliance in the wake of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's purge of his rivals for power.

The pact signed by Sadat and visiting President Nikolai Podgorny provides for continued Soviet military, economic, political and scientific aid. The two governments also pledged "non-interference in the internal affairs of each other," which could be interpreted as a Soviet abandonment of the leftist leaders ousted and arrested by Sadat in the recent Egyptian power struggle.

The treaty, which provides specifically for the training of Egyptian personnel to man Soviet-supplied weapons, was seen by observers in Cairo as a bond which will link Egyptian and Soviet policies for decades to come.

The Russians promised the Egyptians arms and military training to enable them to win back the Sinai desert from Israel. The treaty said arms and equipment would be supplied to Egypt "with a view to strengthening its capacity to eliminate the consequences of aggression as well as increasing its ability to stand up to aggression in general."

(Significantly, he said mounting frustrations with red tape interference in his work ceased overnight after the protocol was signed last week.)

IMPORTANT

The Russian proposal for an economic treaty probably is the most important addition to the visit's results.

Trudeau was given a rough draft of specifics to take back with him for cabinet study.

It lays the basis for negotiations, if Canada agrees to go ahead with it, and is understood to contain such items as exchange of the equivalent of most-favored nation trading status, definition of economic co-operation and the possible ground rules for joint venture industrial developments involving Canadians and Russians.

Canadian sources said it might take some months of study and negotiations before Ottawa can come to a decision.

DEBATE ISSUE

While a treaty can be made and ratified by the cabinet alone, normal practice in the past has given Parliament an opportunity to debate its conditions after signing and before ratification.

Trueau spent his last two nights in Russia in a modern luxury hotel designed and built by Finnish companies recently under the Soviet-Finland economic treaty which has enabled those two neighbours to maintain balance of payments equilibrium while trading intensively.

The communique's final sentence noted that Trudeau's invitation to visit Canada at a mutually-convenient time "was gratefully accepted" by Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

'BON VOYAGE'

Kosygin phoned Trudeau from Moscow Thursday to wish him "bon voyage." Trudeau said it was "au revoir" and not "adieu."

Both men agreed their reports indicated the protocol was well received in the Canadian Press, Pravda and Soviet broadcasts have given rare prominence in coverage of the PM's tour and speeches.

RAIL DISASTER LEAVES 45 DEAD

WUPPERTAL (AP) — Fortyfive persons, most of them school children returning from a study tour, were killed Thursday night in the worst railway accident in West German history.

Railway officials said at least 24 others were severely injured when a special two-coach diesel passenger train and a freight train collided on a single-track line between the Wuppertal suburbs of Oberbarmen and Radevormwald.

The dead, officials said, included 40 pupils in senior classes of the Radevormwalder junior high school, two teachers, an accompanying chaperon and two rail employees. The classes had been on a study tour of the north German city of Bremen.

Barrett's address to the 550 delegates was the feature of today's session. A feature of the convention is expected to be a challenge from B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Ray Haynes.

Party sources say Haynes is certain to contest again the post of first vice-president within the party.

At the 1970 convention, Haynes lost his bid for this position to Paddy Neale, secretary of the Vancouver Labor Council.

It is not known whether Neale will run again. Haynes wants to move the NDP back to a strong pro-labor position.

Control of the party is seated in the offices of the executive and 10 members at large. And this convention will turn into a showdown between the Barrett group and those delegates who support Haynes.

FULL SLATE

A full slate of labor candidates will contest all executive positions. Voting for the executive takes place Saturday afternoon, and members at large will be elected Sunday.

Final policy debate will come before the entire convention Saturday and Sunday afternoon.

Caucusing for special interest groups also will be permitted. So far, Waffle and women's caucuses appear to hold the most interest.

Ferries Change Schedules

Black Ball's MV Coho will go onto its summer schedule Saturday, making four return trips to Port Angeles daily.

Departure times from Victoria will be 6:30 a.m., 11 a.m., 3:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

From Port Angeles 8:45 a.m., 1:15 p.m., 5:30 p.m., and 9:20 p.m.

The summer schedule will remain in effect seven days a week until Sept. 19. Rates are $2.50 for passengers and $7 for cars.

B.C. Ferries went onto a summer schedule last Saturday, with vessels making the Swartz-Bay-Tsawassen run hourly from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Ferries making the Departure Bay (Nanaimo) to Horseshoe Bay (West Vancouver) run start service at 6:15 a.m. and make a final crossing at 11 p.m. Patrons should consult ferry schedules for specific departure times through the day.

The B.C. Ferries summer schedule will be in effect until Sept. 19. Passengers can get on for $1 instead of $2 Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

. . . SLAYER OR MODEL HUSBAND?

To his wife, he was "always a good husband, always treated me right and the children right, without violence. He's always been a good provider. He's not the kind of guy that goes out and drinks in bars. He very seldom goes out at night," she asserted.

The authorities at the Sutter County courthouse here have a different view. To them, Juan Corona is some sort of monster, the accused murderer of a mounting list of transient farm workers, all stabbed in the chest and hacked to death with a heavy blade, perhaps an axe or machete. The corpses have all been unearthed over the past week from shallow graves not far from the farm labor camp that Juan Corona operated on the Jack Sullivan Fruit Ranch some five miles north of Yuba City.

SAME BURIAL

Each of the victims was buried the same way, with his shirt pulled up over his head, investigators said.

Could her husband have done such a thing?

Mrs. Corona shook her head vehemently, hands clasped tightly in front of her as she sat at the end of a long mess hall table.

"As long as I've known him," she insisted, "he always did his best to treat his employees as he did himself. A huband that can be a good provider and a good father couldn't possibly be any other way to other people."

A husky 200-pounder, Corona hired mostly Mexican-American help, rarely Anglos; his friends and family declared. But even when he did sign up "gabacho" labor, Mrs. Corona said, "he treated them equally in my opinion."

A farm labor contractor licensed by California State authorities since 1962, Corona has had a clean record, according to officials of the state's division of labor law enforcement. He lived with his family in Live Oak, about nine miles north of town, until moving into a new home on Richland Road here about three years ago.

QUIET FAMILY

Their neighbors say they kept to themselves, "a very, very quiet family." Corona kept three rabbits in the yard as pets for his little girls, amid a tangle of swings and other play equipment.

One housewife across the street, however, recalled last evening that there was a family spat in front of the Corona home shortly after they moved in. She said it ended with Corona striking his wife.

He was picked up a few hours after sheriff's deputies identified one of the bodies as that of Sigrid E. Beierman, 63, a drifter from adjoining Marysville who had been listed by police there as missing since early May. An officer who had been asked to check then on Beierman's whereabouts had been told that the man was last seen getting into Corona's pickup van. Corona was questioned briefly then, but nothing came of it until the body was found Tuesday afternoon.

DON'T BELIVE IT

"I still can't understand. I still don't believe it," Pedro Corona said. "I will never believe my brother even had the time to do the things the accuse him of . . . my father and my mother, they teach all of us to respect everybody, love everybody."

A boyish-looking man, Pedro Corona believes in God "very hard." So does Gloria Corona, a native of Guadalajara. But she is pessimistic about what will happen to her husband.

"I still have faith in God . . . and hope," she said. "But I believe my husband will probably go to the pentitentiary because he doesn't have representation. Chicano representation. I'm afraid he doesn't understand as much as people might think."

Stray Feathers

By HAROLD HOSFORD

How does that old saying go — first impressions are often deceiving. Well it was never more true than when applied to a visitor's first impression of a sea bird colony.

Partly-finished nests, eggs, half-grown young, bits of decaying and partly-digested food, the wild wheeling and darting of thousands of birds and, above all, their raucous cries add up to a picture of complete and utter chaos. At least that's the impression you get . . . the first impression.

But, as the saying goes, it's deceiving. Despite appearances, colonies of sea birds are orderly social structures governed by intricate behavorial patterns which, while they elude the understanding of man, ensure the successful reproduction of the species involved.

SUBTLE BALANCE

So subtly balanced is the interplay between the birds and their environment, that even a slight disturbance can be disastrous. And disaster to a sea bird colony means few if any young birds raised.

This is why you find most sea bird colonies on remote and inaccessible headlands or, ideally, on rocky islands. Here, usually free from disturbance, they have been able to evolve the rules of colony life that have proved so successful.

Despite occasional food raids by primitive man when eggs, young and even adult birds were collected, sea bird colonies remained relatively secure on their island fortresses. Even the loss of one year's nesting production could be made up the next year if storms kept the hunters away.

But those were the days when man was more closely governed by his environment than he is today. Now instead of frail, unseaworthy craft which their owners put to sea in at their peril, we have speedy, high-powered craft which even a novice can operate with relative safety.

NOT SECURE

No longer are sea bird colonies secure in their rocky isolation. Now they are exposed to disturbance almost continually through the nesting season as modern man takes to the water to enjoy summer in his chosen way.

Few of us can resist the desire to land and take a look as we cruise past the swirling plume of birds over a sea bird colony.

But results we should because a few of these well-intentioned visits, at the wrong time, could destroy a sea bird colony. And the wrong time is from now to the end of August — in effect the whole boating season.

Here are some of the things that can happen in a sea bird colony as a result of frequent disturbances:

Birds may not breed, they may desert their nests or even kill their young.

Eggs left unattended in hot weather can be damaged just as severely as they would if they were left in extremely cold weather.

Frightened young birds get lost and lose contact with their parent.

Last but by no means least — an interloper in a sea bird colony plays into the hands of predators who frequently take advantage of the disturbance to a little extra looting.

Crows are particularly adept at this and their most frequent targets are cormorants' nests. Cormorants seem to be more prone to disturbance than other birds. They are often the first to leave the colony and the last to return.

Even well-meaning people, naturalists interested in learning more about the birds or photographing them, can be as destructive as a gang of high-spirited boys charging through the colony for kicks.

If you feel you have to stop and have a look, the Provincial Parks Branch has published what might be called "Ethics for a Sea Bird Colony Visitor." By following a few simple rules, you reduce the damage to a minimum. Unfortunately there will always be casualties even from a brief visit.

And that's the first rule. Never stay longer than is absolutely necessary. When you enter the colony move slowly, quietly and steadily, never staying long in one place. Watch your step. Eggs and young birds are wonderfully-well camouflaged. Don't stop for long discussions and above all don't picnic near the colony. Find some other island or secluded beach. Picnics near sea bird colonies are murder.

Last but by no means least — your dog. Left to his own he'll have a whale of a time chasing birds and charging all over the place. Restrain him. Better still, leave him in the boat. Few things can wreak more havoc in a colony of nesting birds than a free-wheeling dog.

SECOND YEAR IN ROW

Mystery Illness Strikes Kootenay Lake Sport Fish

GERRARD, B.C. (CP) — Kootenay Lake has produced another in a series of mysterious illnesses that have struck the multi-million-dollar stocks of sports fish in the lake.

For the second year in a row, trophy - sized rainbow trout spawning in the Lardeau River here are suffering from fungus on their heads, gills and fins.

At the same time, fishermen and marina operators in the north arm of the lake have reported that last winter's trout fishing was the worst in memory.

The diseased trout were reported by Dr. A. H. Acara, a Turkish-born scientist who was fired by the provincial fish and game branch last month.

Dr. Acara claimed he was fired because he insisted on sticking to his theory that poor water quality in the reservoir behind Duncan Dam, which discharges into the north end of 65-mile-long Kootenay Lake, was responsible for the deaths of more than a million whitefish in the west arm of the lake in September, 1969.

DAM BLAMED

He also blamed the dam for the fungus that hit the Gerrard rainbows last May, and predicted that there would be more diseased trout this spring.

Dr. Acara visited the spawning grounds this week, and reported that at least as many fish were stricken by the fungus as last year.

Harvey Andrusak, regional biologist for the provincial fish and wildlife branch, said Thursday that 10 to 15 per cent of this year's early run appeared to be suffering from the fungus.

"I'm not alarmed by it at this point," he said. "If anything, it would appear the fish are recovering from whatever problem there was."

MORE SHOW UP

Mr. Andrusak said he had heard stories that larger numbers of diseased fish had been showing up in recent days, but hasn't yet received a detailed report from the remote spawning site.

Scientists who have studied the situation have been unable to explain either the fungus on the large trout or the massive whitefish kill.

They agree, however, that the fungus on the trout is not the basic problem, but merely a symptom of some other disease or stress that may be weakening the fish.

Mr. Andrusak also confirmed the reports of bad fishing for rainbow trout in the north arm of the Lake.

"It's a real paradox. Fishing in the south arm has never been better. Perhaps the Duncan Dam has changed water-flow patterns in the north arm. This may have affected fish distribution, or perhaps altered the abundance of feed."

Ont. 'Welfare Haven' Setting Tougher Rules

TORONTO (CP) — Changes have been made in regulations under the province's General Welfare Assistance Act to give local administrators more discretion in granting payments to persons between 16 and 18 years of age, Thomas Wells, minister of social and family services, said Thursday.

But there was no mention of action against certain immigrant groups, such as American draft-dodgers, who Mr. Wells earlier in the week had suggested may be coming to Ontario to take advantage of what he described as a "welfare haven."

One change, approved by the cabinet Wednesday, gives welfare administrator discretion to request the applicant to obtain a statement from his school that it is desirable for him to continue his studies.

"The intent of this amendment is to ensure that needy students are eligible for general assistance when they are making an effort to do well in school and should stay there rather than be forced to quit and seek work," Mr. Wells told the Ontario legislature.

A second change gives discretion to administrators to determine whether a young person living away from home is eligible for welfare assistance.

The new provision will make ineligible a person under 18 who resides away from home if his parents are willing to support him if he returned.

SOCCER POOL WINNERS SHARE THEIR FORTUNE

NUNEATON, England (AP) — John Marston, a 67-year-old carpenter, won $319,200 in a soccer pool, enabling him to buy his wife the home she dreamed of.

But it also meant moving away from Stan and Renee Pinfold, close friends and neighbors for 40 years. "We go out together all the time and we always share our holidays," explained Marston.

So the Marstons are buying the Pinfolds a new house next to theig new one. And they're giving their friends "a lump sum to do anything with."

"It's wonderful we're not going to split up because of their win," said Mrs. Pinfold, 58. "We don't want anything else. As long as we stay together we'll be happy."

On the Right Track

BEHIND THE MUTUALLY complimentary rhetoric that has emanated from Prime Minister Trudeau and his hosts during his historic visit to Russian cities there lies the possibility that a real breakthrough may have been made by means of this adventure in personal diplomacy and that a new era, as Mr. Trudeau described it, may actually be in store.

The frozen polar wastes throughout history have been an effective barrier to direct exchanges between Canada and the Soviet Union across the Arctic Sea. The Russian Communist regime of 1917 and the cold war which grew from it have been equally decisive deterrents to close diplomatic and trade contacts over the years.

Canada's relations with the Soviet Union have generally improved or retrogressed with the movement of the whole East-West confrontation, so it is significant that Mr. Trudeau's visit, while occurring in a favorable international lull, has gone much farther than most other Western countries' current efforts to help bridge the gap between the ideological hemispheres. This was a Canadian initiative, and regardless of the immediate benefits to be derived — and already there have been some critical examinations of the Russo-Canadian agreement to see who drove the better bargain — it marks a new stage in Canada's development as a member of the global community.

In his tribute to Leningrad yesterday, Mr. Trudeau said that Canada and the Soviet Union "are becoming aware of our partnership" and he suggested the possible future development of "a program of trans-Arctic co-operation of a yet unforeseen nature." That is vague, admittedly, but the recent discoveries and activities in the Canadian North and in Alaska, and long-established Russian communities on their side of the Pole, plus rapid advances in the techniques of determining underground riches and getting them to market, make it impossible to doubt that very sweeping changes will take place in the Arctic in the near future. A policy of friendly co-operation between Russia and Canada will do much to facilitate that growth to the benefit of both.

The intensified association, of course, will present its problems. The position of Canada as a friend and neighbor of both the United States and the Soviet Union, would, in the event that these giants precipitated a serious confrontation, become uncomfortable to say the least. And merely being a friend of Russia can become a prickly situation at times. But these hazards, and others like them, should not be permitted to deter this country in pursuing a policy which holds out much hope for better international relations and a more stabilized world.

Approach to Union

THE MOVEMENT FOR MARITIME union is proceeding sporadically towards its goal: on May 25 a Maritime premiers' council was established by an agreement among the premiers of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. The agreement called for further regional co-operation, steps towards integration of administrative services and the development of regional planning. Premier Hatfield of New Brunswick spoke in the most direct manner to his legislature when he said: "I do not think we should be afraid to pursue the ultimate goal of full political union with vigor."

The agreement does not use the term "union" but speaks instead of "unity of purpose." The next constitutional step towards union will be a meeting of the joint committee of selected members of the three provincial legislatures in Halifax June 10.

The fact is that there are degrees of enthusiasm for union on the Atlantic coast. What practical momentum there is has been slowed in part by differences between New Brunswick and Nova Scotia over the development of Bay of Fundy tidal power.

It would probably be in the best interests of the Maritimers to unite. Delay because of entrenched prejudices could hinder the development of a part of Canada whose welfare would benefit from the economics of integration.

Pushed Onto Centre Stage

HEARINGS ON THE CONSTITUTIONALITY of a Manitoba statute which sought to restrict trade into that province will begin before the Supreme Court of Canada May 31. The government of Manitoba is appealing a decision of the Manitoba Court of Appeal which held the statute unconstitutional.

The outcome of the hearing will have a direct and important bearing on the growing tendency to establish interprovincial trade barriers: the "chicken-and-egg war" between Ontario and Quebec is a case in point.

The curious thing about the case to be heard in Ottawa is that Premier Schreyer deliberately contrived a statute which was ultra vires, knowing that it would be struck down in Manitoba. It was then planned to appeal the case to the Supreme Court in Ottawa, forcing the federal government to defend the concept of free trade across the country as enunciated in the BNA Act. The federal government had, until recently, contended that farm marketing legislation which is now stalled in the Commons was sufficient to clarify matters.

The legal moves initiated by Mr. Schreyer and his legal advisers have come none too soon: his tactic not only forces an issue which deserves immediate attention but points up the need to promote practical as well as cultural methods of keeping the country united.

Object Lesson

A MONTREAL COURT DECISION has emphasized Canada's determination to combat pollution in a way that should impress shipping firms. Having found the skipper of a Greek-owned Liberian-registry vessel guilty of dumping oil in the city's harbor, the court ordered the skipper to jail until the owners pay the $3,000 fine imposed upon him.

This seems a highly practical way of warning not only the man on the bridge, but also the financial interests behind him, that pollution of harbors will not be allowed.

If the punishment of the skipper seems harsh, it is at least an object lesson that this country has passed the point of leniency in treatment of offenders who deliberately foul Canadian waters. And that Liberian registry offers no escape from appropriate penalties.

FROM OTTAWA — By MAURICE WESTERN

Hellyer's Threat to Vulnerable Old Parties

IT was apparent at Paul Hellyer's press conference that Action Canada has encountered a strongly skeptical immediate reaction. While this is understandable in the light of the circumstances and of our political history, it may also be premature. The very term "movement" is an invitation to caution. Of the earlier movements which sought to break established patterns, Harry Stevens' Reconstruction Party went nowhere and the CCF was thwarted in its federal aspirations. Nevertheless, Mr. Coldwll could certainly claim with justice that he and his colleagues were able to build up sufficient pressure to secure the realization of many of their purposes by Liberal governments.

Western

Action Canada suffers from another disability. It appears to have been improvised in some haste after a rather long period in which it seemed that Mr. Hellyer, its leader, had disappeared like Mahomet into the wilderness for extended meditation. The explanation that the organizers have been too busy consulting with ordinary folk to seek out national figures is none too persuasive since Mr. Hellyer did find time to enlist one old political pro (his own term) in the person of Reid Scott, a former NDP member of Parliament.

Two Assets

But Mr. Hellyer has two assets, not to be underrated. The first is that he is a man of great energy, dedication and organizing ability. Now that he sees his course with some clarity, he will probably display the same zeal that drove him (not always wisely) when he was a minister in the Pearson government. It was after his return from the wilderness that Mahomet upset the world.

Secondly, the "movement" as Mr. Hellyer describes it is highly interesting in concept. The chief characteristic of the program is economy. It does not attempt to cover the waterfront of public policy; does not even touch on foreign affairs (although Mr. Hellyer has personal views on current questions which he declined to disclose in the context of Action Canada.) What it does is to concentrate on eight points, so drafted as to make the widest possible appeal to citizens discontented with the present course of events.

Beyond these eight points, which are substantial and directed to the immediate, pressing concerns of many people, everything is open. So are Mr. Hellyer's options. As he explained, Action Canada may operate as a pressure movement seeking to secure the reversal of present policies or the adoption of those favored by the former minister. If progress in this regard is inadequate, Action Canada may endorse candidates, presumably of any party, sharing its views. Or, finally, it may run its own candidates, thus becoming a party in opposition to the established groups.

Obvious Advantage

The advantages are obvious. A detailed, comprehensive program might repel more people than it attracted. A direct move into the political field might have the same result in parts of Canada where partisan loyalties are still strong. But a movement not yet committed is a potential threat, not to be overlooked by the party managers, and thus capable of exerting an influence. There is also the possibility that Action Canada may snowball, as Mr. Hellyer presumably hopes.

On the provincial scene, this has happened. Social Credit in Alberta began as a "movement" and had largely infiltrated the UFA before it emerged as a structured political party. The same thing almost happened federally with the rise of the Progressives.

In some respects the latter example is of special interest. At that time, the political system was in disarray with both old parties widely unpopular. Mr. Hellyer's contention that the present parties are at the moment outmoded and that each is trying to be "all things to all people" has a good deal in common with the Progressive protest and may represent a substantial feeling in the country. On the one hand the Trudeau government seems vulnerable on many counts; on the other the Stanfield Conservatives have been unsuccessful up to now in presenting themselves as a persuasive alternative.

Certainly the eight points or "goals" deal with problems worrisome to most people. There is enough resentment against the monopoly power of big business and the big trade unions to win Mr. Hellyer a hearing in his call for mandatory wage and price guidelines. Immediate and "fair" tax cuts as part of a full employment program will also have an appeal although the meaning of fairness is nowhere indicated in Action Canada's text. The big bureaucracy is another probably popular target and so are Mr. Hellyer's old concerns, lack of housing and adequate systems of transport in urban Canada.

There is a ninth point which failed to make the text, but did emerge at the press conference; another indication possibly of haste in last minute preparations. This is a direct vote of the people on constitutional questions. It has been the general disposition of politicians up to now to assume that constitutions are for the convenience of governments and much too important for popular referenda. How much impact this apparently last minute addition will have remains to be seen.

It is too soon to say whether or not the movement will get off the ground. A crash on take-off would be highly probable if Mr. Trudeau should decide on an early election. As matters stand, however, the prime minister may have more cause for concern than he conceded in Tashkent. Paul Hellyer, out of the cabinet but still in the caucus, could be blandly ignored. Paul Hellyer out of the caucus and on the loose could be damaging to the party establishments and most particularly to his erstwhile Liberal colleagues in urban Canada.

FROM CAIRO — By C. L. SULZBERGER

A Quiet Revolution Won a Quiet Defeat

THIS month produced in Egypt a series of shoddy Machiavellian plots whose net result has been to strengthen President Anwar el-Sadat and to confound those opponents who sought to overthrow him. The latter, hoping for the support of a mob, discovered instead that they had only a meek flock. The show began May 2 when Aly Sabry, the unpopular vice-president who pretended to be Moscow's man in Cairo and who coveted the succession to President Nasser, attempted to oust Sadat over the new confederation between Egypt, Libya and Syria. The president sponsored this to bring pressure on Israel, gain the backing of Libyan oil money and shore up his flanks against radical Algeria to the west and Iraq to the east.

Sulzberger

Sadat arrested Sabry easily but was unaware of a second plot led by Interior Minister Sharawy Gomaa who detested Sabry but was working as a kind of co-belligerent to get rid of the president. On looking back it is astonishing that Gomaa's effort failed.

It included among its leaders all Egypt's real power symbols: the bosses of police, intelligence, security, Parliament and the single party (Arab Socialist Union) plus the ministers of Interior, War, Electricity, Housing, Information and for Presidential Affairs.

Gomaa's conspiracy was exposed by accident Tuesday night, May 11. A police major in the bugging department under Gomma was given wiretap recordings to file away, some in the regular archives and some in secret depositories to which only Gomaa himself had access. One tape was illegibly labelled. The major didn't know how to file it so he played it back on a recorder and was amazed to hear two well-known leaders attacking Sadat.

Early Morning Warning

At 1 a.m. Wednesday, May 12, he decided to inform Sadat but was refused entry to the president's house. He finally persuaded a secretary that Sadat must be awakened and made to listen to two tapes which he handed over.

The president sat up with a start when he heard these, one recording his own voice. He telephoned loyal associates to warn them and decided to play a poker-faced game. He kept an appointment to speak to commanders of the Second Army and rode in a helicopter beside the war minister, Lieut.-Gen. Mohammed Fawzi, a key conspirator.

As soon as he got back he dismissed Gomaa, secretly appointed the governor of Alexandria to replace him, and sent the new minister with three officers to seal off the huge Interior Department area where buggings were recorded. It was soon confirmed that a coup d'etat had been planned for Thursday, May 20, with the seizure of Sadat by agents secreted among his guards.

Gomaa was arrested and it was announced on the radio Thursday that he had "resigned." At that instant the other conspirators were meeting in the war minister's office. They realized something had gone wrong when they heard the announcement and decided to resign en masse, assuming Sadat wouldn't fight back, that chaos would result and, if demonstrators were shot by police, General Fawzi would call out the army to maintain order.

The war minister summoned the commanders of the army, navy and air force and asked them to join the plot but they refused. Having heard of this meeting and also of Fawzi's participation in the new resignations, Lieut. Gen. Mohammed Sadek, the chief of staff, entered and ordered the ex-minister out. He warned: "You no longer have a right to be here; we don't tolerate political meetings in this ministry."

Arrests

Thursday night Sadat instructed the new police boss to arrest the conspirators and named the loyal Sadek as war minister. The general accepted, saying: "The army has no interest in politics. Everything is secure. We only await orders in one battle" (Israel).

After midnight Sadat was visited by his close friend, the well-known editor Mohammed Hassanein Heykal, who found the president sitting in his pajamas and dressing gown on his bedroom balcony overlooking the Nile. Sadat remarked simply: "They brought it on themselves."

The affair is now wound up. The conspiracy proved to have many heads but one frail body. The populace has been demonstrating for Sadat ever since and he has emerged as a new strong man. The Russians, apparently not playing factions as Sabry tried to imply, are lying low; relations with the United States have, if anything, improved.

Everything is over but the shooting and, since the chances of peace with Israel have in the long run very possibly improved and since the Egyptians don't like to execute the leaders of even the most treasonable conspiracy, the chances are there won't be any shooting.

Looking Back

From the Times of May 28, 1911:

Fred J. Wiseman, the aviator, is here and tomorrow afternoon at the exhibition grounds he will make a series of flights calculated to give the Victorian, who has not yet had the opportunity of witnessing heavier-than-air machines in action, a display that will open his eyes to the progress made by man towards the mastery of the air in the past few years.

The American birdman arrived by this afternoon's Seattle boat, accompanied by a large staff of expert mechanics.

Saturna Protest

Mayor Curtis again butts into Saturna Island Affairs by prolonging the 10-acre freeze.

The kindest act Curtis can do for Saturna is to leave us alone, and stop dumping raw sewage into our waters from the Saanich Peninsula. The Regional Planning Board and its high priced crew have done a great deal of harm to this Island already by getting under the feet of those who were doing something for Saturna.

This little gang enjoying the good life in Victoria are slowly undermining the confidence of our people in themselves, and many are trying to sell out.—Jim Money, Saturna Island.

Campaign Funds

If anyone had a shadow of doubt that we, in this province and in fact in Canada, are in the hands of the wealthy few, surely the article by Bruce Yemen "the crafty politician who booby-trapped a government" should dispel such a doubt.

Our premier, who is dependent for political funds from such sources, cannot possibly over-ride the wishes of those few and act in the real interests of the majority. However I accept, without reservation, that here in B.C. and in fact in Canada we live under a free and democratic system and so the final blame lies with the selfish and apathetic public which elects and re-elects freely the Social Credit government.

Undoubtedly this is what the public wants but we should not delude ourselves that our affairs are operated in the interests of the majority and as long as political parties are dependent on political funds from various sources the present condition will continue and we have only ourselves to blame.—M. P. B. Wrixon, 1680 Poplar.

'Conning' Trudeau?

How utterly ridiculous for Mr. Trudeau to believe for an instant that the Russian Government cares one wit for Canada's great knowledge of permafrost pipelines.

Actually, I find it very difficult to believe that our Prime Minister is naive enough to allow himself to be sucked in by such a lot of rot from the greatest con men the world has ever known.

I shouldn't be a bit surprised if we Canadians will soon see a great number of Russian technicians entering our country under the pretence of gaining, or trading, friendly technology. This could very well be the start of an even friendlier occupation.

We do not need Russia, we do not need her ideas, and I for one do not feel the need of a Prime Minister of Canada who would in any form whatever associate himself with a Communist nation.

It is later than many of us think. — Red Loveys, Humpback Rd.

PORTRAIT of Mao Tse-tung looks down over entrance to school in Changsha where he studied and taught. Characters spell "No. 1 Normal School" in Mao's own calligraphy.

NO TIME FOR TRIVIALITIES

The Education of Chairman Mao

By NORMAN WEBSTER

CHANGSHA — This is where Mao Tse-tung cut off his pigtail. Not only that, but he and a friend forcibly clipped the queues from more than ten schoolmates who had reneged on promises to cut theirs off too.

The acts were performed in 1911 by a 17-year-old peasant intellectual at school in the busy capital of Hunan. They were symbolic of the revolutionary career to follow.

Wearing of the pigtail had been imposed on Chinese men as a sign of subservience by the conquerors from Manchuria who established the Ching dynasty in 1644. None of the many photographs and artistic renditions of Mao as a teen-ager show him with a pigtail.

He told Edgar Snow, however, that he had one too until a rising tide of anti-Manchu feeling led many young men to cut them off. Late in 1911 would come the uprising that brought an end to imperial China.

The years in Changsha were probably the most important of any to Mao's development. He broadened his mind and toughened his body, laid the basis for his political thought, developed ideas and techniques and won friends who would follow him in the lean years to come.

▣

Mao's experiences after his arrival in the Hunanese capital in 1911 included studies at middle school, a six-month hitch in the army, registry but non-attendance at schools teaching police work, soap making, law and commerce, studies on his own in the Hunan provincial library (where he saw his first map of the world) and attendance at Changsha's First Normal School.

The normal school, where he studied to be a teacher from 1913-18, has been carefully restored. It is presented as the place where Mao prepared himself comprehensively to be a revolutionary.

Visitors are shown Mao's classrooms and class photographs, desks where he worked, newspapers and books he read, with his critical notes in the margins, a bunk-bedded room where he slept with nine others, the room where workers came for evening classes he organized.

Mao became a key figure among his fellows. In his final year he organized the New People's Study Society, a radical student group destined to have considerable influence on the future of China. Almost all its members later became Communists.

"It was a serious-minded little group of men," Mao told Edgar Snow, "and they had no time to discuss trivialities. Everything they did or said must have a purpose."

This preoccupation with higher things is driven home during a tour of the normal school. "Chairman Mao never engaged in meaningless chitchat with his school mates," the girl guide informed me primly.

▣

"They had no time to talk about money or families or girls."

"Instead, there was a daily cold sluice from a bucket at the school well. There were also long walks, swims and exposure to the elements by physical culture fiends intent on toughening their constitutions.

This conditioning paid off for the 77-year-old Chairman. His health was to stand up to years of battle in the mountains of the south, the almost incredible hardships of the Long March and more years living in caves in the northwest.

Mao conditioned himself in other ways. To develop his powers of concentration, the girl said, he would practise studying in Changsha's noisy markets.

He had no use for certain courses, especially one on drawing. "Once during a drawing examination Chairman Mao drew a horizontal line with a semicircle over it and called it a sunrise. Then he handed in his paper and left to read newspapers," the girl said.

The teacher who made the strongest impression on the future leader was Yang Chang-chi, who tried to instil ideas of morality, virtue and usefulness to society in his pupils. Mao followed Yang to Peking after graduation in 1918, and in 1920 married his daughter, Yang Kai-hui.

The years after graduation were busy ones. Mao went twice to Peking, and in Changsha led student strikes, authored radical propaganda, became a labor organizer.

Young Whites Leave Rhodesia And Its 'Air of Repression'

By COLIN LEGUM

A new rebellion is taking place in Rhodesia — the rebel African republic of Ian Smith. This time it is among the children of the white community, most of which supports the Rhodesian Front's commitment to preserving white rule in this former British colony.

Following signs of a growing brain-drain from Rhodesia among white school-leavers, a recent series of surveys has disturbed teachers and dismayed parents. One survey, conducted by the principal of Salisbury's Ranche House Adult Education College, found that about half of his 200 sixth formers (aged between 16 and 18) intend to leave Rhodesia once their education is completed. Of these, about half said they had no intention of ever returning. Notable among countries mentioned for settlement were Britain and Rhodesia's prosperous southern neighbor, South Africa.

People Are Afraid

Among reasons given for their wish to quit Rhodesia are that the country is too insular; there is an air of repression and people are afraid of expressing themselves; it is a narrow-minded country; it is sports-mad; there is no scope for future advanced technology; and too much depends on the country's political future.

At another Salisbury school, where pupils spoke of the country being suffocating, narrow-minded and insular, their English master said after interviewing them:

"The reasons they gave for wanting to leave Rhodesia are logical — there are no openings here, and they feel they would get better professional training overseas. Some of them talked of the limited cultural opportunities in Rhodesia. They think more deeply these days, and they are not prepared to accept their parents' ideology without question."

More Intelligent

John Bishop, the public relations officer of the University of Rhodesia, carried out a survey of 16 schools when he found that school-leavers were reluctant to finish their education in their own university. His findings showed that there is "an overriding desire to leave the country, more particularly among the more intelligent children." He said in an interview with Leone Salmon of the Rand Daily Mail: "They wanted to leave home, parents, Rhodesia society, the lot. They said it was oppressive and insular, and they simply wanted to escape, at least for a time."

The discovery by teachers of the rebellion in their classrooms was described as "disturbing" by Ken Mew, the principal of Ranche House College, who said that while every country had its "brain drain" problem, Rhodesia's was abnormal. "Something must be done before we find ourselves a nation of decrepit old people," he said.

This fear is not altogether fanciful. The Rhodesia regime's own recent statistics show that the country's white age groups have altered significantly over the last decade, the percentage between the ages of 25 and 44 having dropped from 30.5 of the total white population of 26.3, while the percentage of those over 45 increased from 23.3 to 27.2.

During this period (1961-69) the number of white children under four years of age had dropped from 24,629 to 19,380. Another significant pointer is that the natural increase of births over deaths among white Rhodesians had dropped from 2.1 per cent in 1959 to 1.1 per cent in 1968.

These figures show that, despite immigration, Rhodesia has seen an exodus of its most economically-active group; those between 25 and 44 years of age, and an intake over over-45s, many of them retired, or elderly people near the age of retirement.

The declared objective of Smith's unilateral declaration of independence in 1965 was to make Rhodesia safe for future generations of whites in the country; but unless the present trends are significantly altered there will be fewer generations of whites left to protect.

The View Is Clearer Outside

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH

SINGAPORE — The progress of China's ping-pong politics and the increasing number of Western journalists who have been allowed to visit Peking and other Chinese cities have brought forecasts from some observers of the Far East scene that the profession of "China-watching" is doomed.

If Peking continues to hold open the door to the West, one Hong Kong-based commentator said recently, "who needs China-watchers when you can see what is happening at first hand?"

★ ★ ★

The answer is everyone who has needed them in the past. The Pekinologists, unable to enter the country for lack of a visa during long, lean years of isolation self-imposed upon an angry young China, picks up what he can from the other side of the curtain like some latter-day Polonius and is frequently knifed for his pains.

He is otherwise a free agent, however. In a listening post like Hong Kong he can talk openly to refugees, diplomats, businessmen and technicians from China, many of whom would not dare to speak frankly while still in their own country. And he can feed on as much as he can absorb from the big professional or governmental agencies that collect every newspaper published in China, monitor every provincial radio station, painstakingly interview every escapee and renegade and run vast record systems on everything and everybody of note in the People's Republic.

Once the curtain parts and the correspondent can cross the frontier the drama must inevitably develop a third dimension, for the vast stage and its cast of millions are laid out before him. But he is shepherded and guided and surrounded by indoctrinated people who give stock party answers to his stock questions and dodge the offbeat ones to which there are no official replies.

His only other sources are the local radio and the publications available in the place in which he happens to be at any given moment, plus a scattering of foreigners whose overall knowledge is not much greater than his own and whose freedom of movement is far less. He has his eyes and ears but he must announce where he is going before he goes there and may not deviate from the itinerary agreed for him.

★ ★ ★

I was in Peking in 1958 when Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev paid his historic visit to Chairman Mao in the middle of the disastrous Great Leap Forward. But neither I nor the correspondents of the two Western news agencies with permanent bureaux in the capital knew that he had come until he had gone again — nor did the entire corps of non-Communist diplomats.

I heard the bare facts some days later — but China-watchers in Hong Kong already had them. Another correspondent and myself then visited farming collectives all over the country, but we were never told that the Chinese had been experimenting with their first "people's commune" for the past three months. We learned this also when we returned to Hong Kong.

For five years after the late Lord Attlee visited Peking at the head of a Labour Party delegation and accompanied by several British correspondents in 1954 many Western newspapermen (Americans excepted) were able to get visas and tour China some two or three times and for periods of two and even four months.

★ ★ ★

But the Hong Kong China-watchers did not go out of business. There is no reason to think that they will now, for despite much excellent reporting from the ping-pong followers and other veteran Far East correspondents who have since been allowed into the country, not a single item of any importance has emerged from it all.

Nonetheless, argues the Polonius-killer, the China-watcher outside China even failed to predict that Peking would suddenly open the doors. But then so did the China-watcher inside. They complement each other and there is plenty of room in the dark for them both.

An Evening With the Girls

By ALAN BRIEN
New Statesman

LONDON — The Open Space is an airless underground box, silver-painted walls wriggling with steam pipes like varicose veins, the black-girded roof pressing down on your head like a hangover, tucked away between two skin-flick cinemas on Tottenham Court Road.

Last Sunday night, about a hundred of us, mainly women, were scattered about the tiered benches, smoking toughly, passing round bottles of wine, waiting for the start of an open debate on — on what every debate seems to be on these days — women's liberation.

●

Earlier we had seen Jane Arden's all-girl phafasmagoria, A New Communion for Freaks, Prophets and Witches. This was a nightmarish melange of mime and song and dance and soliloquy, all strobing lights and naked bodies and tortured language, darkly illuminating the theme that society is a criminal asylum, where women grow crazy serving a life sentence playing mom. "Submissive means ill. Feminine means submissive."

Lined up against the glittering wall behind a trestle table, something between the Last Supper and a row of Aunt Sallys at a fair, were a panel of women, two journalists, an actress, a novelist and a Sonia Orwell, who were to launch the discussion. The audience looked anything but submissive, and I was glad I wasn't trapped out there.

Mrs. Orwell, very much the head girl, with a patient smile and an understanding eye, opened up by saying that what concerned her was how we brought up our children. Should we not treat them as people instead of training them to be pretty little girls or manly little boys?

Jill Tweedie said the trouble with most women was that they were not aware how they were oppressed. The point of a meeting like this should be a heightened consciousness of what it meant to be female. "If we can stop being passive and release our aggression, we can also release our creativity."

At this point, almost as if on cue, aggression was released from the back row in the person of the creative Jane Arden, who hissed in a voice which could have stripped paint. "Get off your chairs and come and meet us. What is this — a bloody boardroom? Sitting up there on your little bourgeois achievements. I've got a black man next to me." (The man next to her, actually a pale creamy brown, looked startled.) "We want the whole bloody society torn up by its roots. It has to be destroyed from the bottom. We're on the edge of a new dimension. The holocaust is here."

"Good point," said Mrs. Orwell. "Well done. What do you say, Edna?" Edna O'Brien smiled her slow, bemused smile and said: "There are no men and no women and no children. Only there are, do you see? We have all of us to learn to exist."

●

Various hands shot up. Half a dozen voices rose and began to interweave in a fugue. At last Mrs. Orwell recognized from the chair a dark-haired, handsome fellow ("You can tell he's a male chauvinist, just to look at him," observed a girl behind me) called Fenton Bresler who said Miss Arden's remarks were just the sort of tripe you could expect from the author of the ghastly nonsense performed earlier. "Where is all this oppression of women?"

Mrs. Orwell appealed for some practical suggestion from anybody. Prunella Scales said she had a boring bourgeois non-revolutionary suggestion: could not the working hours of people in Britain be rearranged so that men could spend more time with their children? Today the pattern seemed devised to place as much strain as possible on the structure of the family.

The word "family" was like a red rag to a policeman for a section of the audience. "Family! Family?" shouted a man. "What is this thing called 'family'? It is the root of all our troubles. It's where the poison is. Families are dangerous."

●

Somebody put in a tiny squeal of defence for the value of motherhood. "Mother! Mother is the dirtiest word of the lot," declaimed Jane Arden. "Anybody can be a mother."

Almost everybody was now arguing. An actressy lady, in a short gauzy black dress which was almost a tutu, took the floor. "Most of you probably don't know me but I'm the girl who runs this joint. I've bled to death to make it work and, to have this women's theatre group here. I want you to know I think this meeting is a f . . . . drag and I'd be grateful if you'd all go home." There was a two-second silence after she left. Then the speeches started again.

A woman with a Northern accent attacked the panel as little bourgeois pets who had got on a man's world and could afford nannies and au pairs which left them free to ask such ludicrous, self-centred questions as "Who am I?" What we wanted was to free women from having three kids hanging on their skirts and a husband who went out every night.

Edna O'Brien said she could never quite believe in the word liberation as applied to women. It seemed to be concerned with minds and ideas. But we were also sensual. We shouldn't forget our bodies.

The talk veered off onto washing up and doing laundry. Carolee Schniemann told us that no man had ever offered to rinse out her underwear. Anne Sharpley said: "I just give him the Daz and say get on with it."

The angry (or rather angriest) woman from the North argued that men were oppressed too. "When they come home from their shitty jobs, why shouldn't they expect a meal to be ready?" There was a long jeering groan.

"I'm a working wife," said somebody. "When I come home from my shitty job, who do you think cooks my meals?" Another pointed out that two-thirds of married women now worked, what were their husbands doing to help?

●

A lesbian announced herself and offered to baby-sit for any of her less-fortunate sisters still under male domination. "A splendid practical proposal," intervened Mrs. Orwell. "Can we have your telephone number? I'll baby-sit myself."

With that, the meeting began to disintegrate into groups. Everybody agreed it had been a shambles, a waste of time, a useless expense of energy. I seemed alone in saying how much I had enjoyed myself.

Yet I couldn't help noticing that the women expecially left in a kind of a glow, a warm radiation of exercise well done, of muscles used, brains activated, voices raised. Something had been liberated, if only steam.

CITY TEEN-AGERS TO HELP

Wilderness Hostel Planned

Victoria teen-agers interested in helping develop a wilderness summer hostel near Prince George can get details on the project at a meeting this Sunday.

The Northern Wilderness Project has received a $9,600 grant from the federal government's Opportunities for Youth program and will operate through June, July and August.

It will be operated on 320 acres of largely wilderness land 20 miles northeast of Prince George, on property owned by former Victoria child care worker John Hulber. He now lives there all year.

Youth worker Lynn Curtis of Saturna Island is organizing participation in the Victoria area and will explain the project at Sunday's meeting, to be held at 4 p.m. in room D of the YMCA, at Courtney and Quadra.

The project's shore-term goal:

"To provide meaningful activities for high-school-aged kids — both school attenders and dropouts — in a wilderness setting under the supervision of skilled and sympathetic young adults and to provide an environment where an appreciation for the natural order of life can take place."

Ultimately, the aim is "to involve young people in the planning and building of a permanent summer resource for kids and to provide a model for youth-built wilderness camps or hostels."

LONG HOUSE

The land was originally developed as a homestead 60 years ago and there are three buildings there now. The idea is to maintain the natural setting, which means cooking on wood stoves and no electricity. There is a lake and stream on the property.

Among the buildings planned — a long house based on those of the coast Salish Indians which will serve as cook house and meeting place.

Seven people have already moved to the site and a garden has been planted, Curtis said Thursday.

He said the project needs all kinds of young people, in roughly the 14 to 19 age group, but it's hoped they will be self-reliant.

"It's not a baby-sitting service or a place for parents to send their kids. We want the initiative to come from the kids."

STREET NAME CHANGE

Victoria council gave approval Thursday to new street-naming on the Begbie-Shelbourne route.

The stretch from Begbie-Pandora north to Pembroke will remain as Begbie Street, and the section north from Pembroke will be named Shelbourne Street.

A bylaw formally changing the names must still receive council approval.

Hearing Request Refused

The Canadian Transport Commission has turned down Victoria's request to hold hearings into B.C. Telephone Company's rate increase application in this city.

Council received and filed the letter outlining reasons for the decision at Thursday's meeting.

The letter said because B.C. Tel's head offices are in Vancouver, and because Vancouver is the largest B. C. city, it would be more "convenient" to hold all the hearings there.

B.C. Tel, a federally-chartered company, has applied to increase its rates by 15 per cent.

Ald. Tom Christie was the only alderman to complain, saying the hearings will be of "convenience only to the telephone company.

Zoning Proposal . . . Round Three

Residents of the Ivy-Place Cedar Hill Road area will get a chance to publicly oppose a plan to rezone six lots for apartment use.

But the public hearing date has not been set.

It is the third attempt in 18 months by J. W. Dickie to try for a rezoning of the property, and Ald. Hugh Ramsay charged at Thursday's council meeting that the rezoning application was "out of order."

Before council had received the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission's recommendation against creating a special development area on the site but in favor of rezoning it to ordinary apartment use, Dickie's solicitors applied to amend the application, Ramsay said.

Ramsay tried to kill the whole application, saying council has already twice rejected the rezoning of this land, "and as far as I am concerned, that correspondence from Hallatt, Stewart and Gow is out of order."

The APC usually jealously guards its decision, said Ramsay, so it was wrong "for the developer to know before council did."

A letter received from Hallatt, Stewarf and Gow the day after the APC's secret decision referred to the APC's action taken "last night" to opppose creation of a special development area.

The rest of council ignored this, and only Ramsay and Ald. Tom Christie voted against holding another public hearing on the matter.

HOW MANY TIMES

Christie said he wanted to know how many times residents could stand the "imposition and badgering and browbeating" by the developer.

Ald. Robert Baird said he has examined the area closely and thinks it will be "immensely improved" by construction of an apartment block.

Baird said that there are always complaints when a new apartment is proposed, but the "public is usually happy" with the results.

Ramsay said council's earlier decisions should be respected and its reasons for making the decision then "still stand."

THE WEATHER

Another sunny day is expected in B.C. with afternoon temperatures in the mid-eighties in the southern interior and in the high sixties and seventies elsewhere. However the north coast has clouded over due to an approaching Pacific disturbance which will give some rain to the Charlottes and the northern mainland today. The system will weaken as it moves inland across B.C. but it will spread showers to northern Vancouver Island and the central interior late in the day. Bands of clouds and cooler temperatures can be expected in southern areas Saturday. Although a ridge of high pressure will develop over the coast behind the disturbance, air with the ridge will remain fairly moist and cool and skies will be slow to clear.

If all wagon buyers were alike we'd just build one wagon.

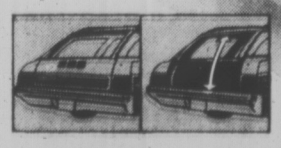
Chevrolet

YOU MAY WIN UP TO $30,000.
Your Chevrolet dealer offers you a full range of wagons—big, mid-size and little. Right now, he offers you something else, too. Look for the Moneymiles Sweepstakes sign at participating Chevrolet dealers. You could win up to $30,000—based on your car's mileage. No purchase necessary. Your dealer will be happy to give you all the details. One way or another, you're always a winner with Chevrolet!

CONCOURS
The mid-size wagon by Chevrolet. With a cargo floor length of close to 7½-feet and a width between wheel-housings of almost 4 feet. Choose a 2 or 3-seat model.

The two-way tailgate. Down flat for easy loading and just 22 inches off the ground. Swings open for passengers. There's even a step, recessed into the bumper.

VEGA KAMMBACK
Our little wagon. Just swing-up the tailgate, window and all. Makes a big opening to a handy, 50.2 cubic feet of cargo space. Being a true Vega, it's a lot of wagon for such a little wagon.



Now you see it, now you don't.
That's Chevy's disappearing tailgate.
Loading a wagon has never been easier!

KINGSWOOD ESTATE
Chevy's Big Wagon, with a total cargo space of a whopping 106.4 cubic feet. If you want more space, better check our truck catalogue! You have the option of 2-seat or 3-seat, with all seats facing forward.

Some of the equipment illustrated is optional at extra cost.

You cut down on air pollution, too.

About a decade ago, we made a promise to remove our cars from the air pollution problem.
Today we're making good. We're almost there.
1971 Chevrolets emit 80% less hydrocarbons than typical cars of roughly ten years ago.
And about 2/3 less carbon monoxide.
Best of all, we're testing devices that can reach control levels as high as 95%.
But it hasn't been easy. We've had to develop devices that muzzle and reburn exhaust fumes.
Devices that check wayward gases around the crankcase vent.
Devices that prevent the escape of raw gasoline vapors.
We've even had to invent instruments sophisticated enough to measure the effectiveness of these devices.
The goal and reward have been one and the same: cleaner air.
Estimates are that if all North American industry could make similar strides, and all cars on the road today were emission controlled like '71 Chevrolets, we'd be breathing 1940 air.
You might call that a great step backward. A step we've been proud to take.

Outdoor Classroom Plan Aided by Provincial Grant

The provincial government has contributed $2,037 to help develop a regional park near Duncan as an outdoor classroom.

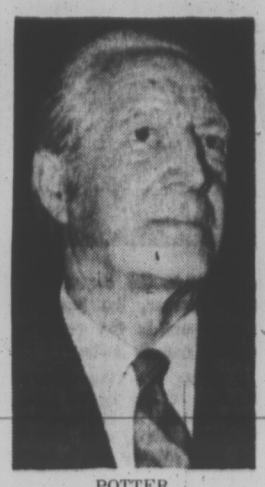
Eves Park, 47 acres of forest with rock outcrops and a creek, lies between Duncan and Crofton.

It was the homestead of Janet Goodall, who bequeathed it to the province about a decade ago on the understanding it would be used for educational purposes.

The provincial government rated the property as a class C regional park and established a board to administer it, headed by Uvic bilogist Marc Bell. That board in turn has an advisory board of people closer to the scene and its chairman is C. R. (Bob) Moss, director of elementary instruction for the Cowichan school board.

Recently the park has been used for nature studies by elementary school students and Moss said today he anticipates its use will increase. A barn on the property has been converted to an elementary laboratory.

There is also a house occupied by a caretaker but the house needs to be replace at an estimated cost of $6,000. The $2,037 presented by Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan this week will go toward this.



POTTER
. . . notes pollution

Sewage Plant May Serve All Residents of Bay

DUNCAN — A sewage treatment plant proposed for a subdivision in Cowichan Bay may be expanded to handle sewage from all of the 600 residents in the area.

Details of the plant planned by Starboard Investments for its 30-acre subdivision were explained by engineer Russell Potter at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday and drew endorsement from Chamber members.

Potter said the plant, which would be built with an outfall to the sea, would not cause coliform count that could be detected.

"With a secondary treatment plant the pollution will be gone before it reaches the surface. After the effluent is treated it will be a clear, odorless fluid."

Potter said that many Cowichan Bay residents are now dumping raw sewage into the sea. The coliform count (which is the count of bacteria) in Cowichan Bay is more than 1,600.

TOO POLLUTED

"Cowichan Bay already is too polluted for safe swimming. The coliform count should be less than 1,000."

He said that his firm either wants to build its own small secondary treatment plant and turn it over to the Cowichan Valley regional district for $1 or give financial aid to the district to link all of Cowichan Bay to a larger model.

"If sewers can go in the whole area we are out of the sewer business," he said. "Otherwise we can't leave 30 acres sitting. Septic tanks won't work in clay."

Potter, whose firm has been looking into the treatment plant along with the regional board for over two years, told chamber members that the plant, if installed, would initially dump between 7,500 to 15,000 gallons of effluent into the bay daily. A second plant eventually would bring the total to 30,000 gallons daily.

Regional director for Cowichan Bay Jev Tothill said he is currently trying to get information regarding a secondary sewage treatment plant out to residents as quickly as he can to clear the way for a sewer bylaw to be held as soon as possible.

He stressed at the chamber meeting that he is very concerned about the health hazard, both from raw sewage being dumped into the bay and effluent that is slowly working its way to the bay from septic tanks in clay.

Residents will never be able to get a sewage plant for less, he said.

"If we don't get one in we are facing extreme health hazards." "We have already had one case of hepatitis this year. I am very concerned about it."

Tothill said that with the market as low as it is now a treatment plant for the whole area, which involves about 600 residents, would cost $250,000.

"If Starboard comes in with us instead of building their own that would probably mean a $50,000 reduction."

MONEY APPEALS GO TO VOTERS

DUNCAN — Two money referendums will be presented Saturday to Cowichan Valley residents.

Cowichan school district taxpayers will vote on a $577,800 building referendum for 17 essential classrooms. This will be the third time the building referendum has been presented. It was defeated last year in April and again in December.

Cowichan Lake taxpayers will vote on a $155,000 referendum for additional construction to their new $400,000 curling-skating complex.

Big Riding Event Kicks Off Today

DUNCAN — Riders from Oregon, Alberta, Vancouver, Langley, Parksville and Duncan are competing in the second annual Festival of Sport three-day combined training event at Pine Paddocks riding centre today, Saturday and Sunday.

The first phase dressage test started this morning, to be followed on Saturday morning by some higher tests, to Prix St. Georges to be judged by Mrs. Claire Maynard, Vancouver, first holder of the western Canada dressage title.

The cross-country riding on Saturday starts with 2½ miles roads and trails to be ridden by each competitor, followed by the two-mile jumping course around Pine Paddocks at noon.

Following veterinary inspection by Dr. Dave Reed on Sunday morning, the final stadium jumping course will test horses for stamina and agility, before scores of all sections combined proclaim the winners of the B.C. gold, silver and bronze medals and many ribbon rosettes provided by the Festival of Sport committee.

Trailer Owners Join Fight Against Fee

DUNCAN — Seventy mobile home park owners Thursday night backed the Western Mobile Park Owners' Association in its opposition to a new B.C. fee in lieu of tax.

Owners from as far up Vancouver Island as Campbell River gathered to hear Chuck Rogers, president of WMHPOA, describe the Mobile Home Park Fee Act and what he called its "many discriminatory features against tenants and operators."

The act requires monthly payment of a fee based on the number of mobile home units situated in a park, which could work out to an average $5 or $6 per unit.

June 15 is the first deadline for payment and operators have said they refuse to recognize the law.

Rogers said today the Vancouver Island park owners will support any action the association takes against the fee.

He said further action is contemplated, and that if a legal confrontation arises, it is planned to present a full grievance on behalf of mobile home owners and park operators.

Hearing Set On Zoning

NANAIMO (CP) — A public hearing is scheduled June 7 to consider zoning controls for Gabriola Island and other nearby islands. The proposal would set a minimum of five acres for new construction and ban construction in a band 500 feet wide around the island's shore.

PETERSON JOINS FIGHT AGAINST FOUR SEASONS

VANCOUVER (CP)—A court action is in the offing which will challenge a bylaw that rezoned 14½ acres of land at the entrance to Stanley Park here, and possibly defeat a proposed high-density apartment project for the site.

The action is the culmination of several months' protest agaonst the $40 million Four Seasons project, which detractors argued would erect a concrete wall at the entrance of the park. The project, consisting of three 33-storey apartment towers and several smaller ones as well as a hotel, would house about 5,000 people in an area with an already high population density.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson has lent his name to the action against bylaw 4065 which in 1963 allowed rezoning of the site to permit apartments and hotels.

Lawyer George L. Murray said he is only waiting for a letter—expected soon—from Mr. Peterson regarding details of paying court costs of the case should the action fail. Mr. Murray said funds are being held available as an indemnity for payment of costs.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. C. Phillips, who live directly across from the Four Season site, are known as the relators in the case — those actually pressing the suit.

Mr. Murray said "a mere ratepayer has not sufficient status to initiate an action," therefore Mr. Peterson agreed to lend his name to launch the suit.

A plebiscite asking Vancouver ratepayers if they favor purchasing the site through expropriation as an addition to 1,000-acre Stanley Park is to be held June 23. Estimates of the cost of purchasing it have been as high as $10 million.

Government Has Given Up Pushing Marketing Bill

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has given up on repeated attempts to win Commons passage before the summer adjournment of its national farm marketing boards legislation.

Informants say the government will not bring the matter before the Commons again until the fall.

The Commons plans to adjourn on or about June 30, after approving pay increases for MPs, and return soon after Labor Day, Sept. 7.

The government has maintained all along that its marketing legislation provides the best prospect for a peace act in the chicken-and-egg war — the establishment by some provinces of trade barriers against imports of eggs and broiler chickens from other provinces.

Manitoba has sent a test case to the Supreme Court of Canada and a court decision in the matter may come before the Commons is asked to deal with it again.

FEAR BUREAUCRATS

The Conservatives have fought the marketing legislation partly on the grounds that it would take all farm decisions out of the hands of farmers and allocate them to bureaucrats.

The Conservatives have done fairly well this session in getting the government to change its mind.

For instanc, the government under furious Conservative fire withdrew a bill to restrict the powers of the auditor-general, Parliament's financial watchdog.

It agreed to opposition requests that all legislation and regulations be placed before a parliamentary committee to make sure there is no conflict with basic rights.

If this agreement had been reached earlier than it was, the government would have been forced to undergo questioning for all its regulations under the War Measures Act, proclaimed in October and since lifted.

Compromise was reached on the government's reorganization bill and it was quickly passed this week.

The reorganization bill stood in the name of Prime Minister Trudeau but he never made a Commons speech about it and the government-opposition compromise on it was reached while the prime minister was touring Russia.

Just before Mr. Trudeau left for Russia May 17 he accused Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, of lying about all-party negotiations on the bill. Mr. Baldwin also accused Mr. Trudeau of lying.

After that, it looked as if any compromise was impossible.

But, Mr. Baldwin says, he swallowed his anger, overlooked Mr. Trudeau's petulance and went to work with Allan MacEachen, government House leader.

"If Mr. Trudeau would stay out of the country longer we could get more of Canada's business done," Mr. Baldwin said with a grin in an interview.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

Okanagan Hel.

More than $3 million will be invested this year in new equipment and two other companies, reports Okanagan Helicopters Ltd., which has a new level of revenue in 1970.

A total $6.37 million income was taken in last year compared with $6.25 million, leaving net earnings of $173,922 vs. $157,600 before extraordinary items.

But the latter figures became $79,712 vs. $190,000 with non-recurring losses on the sale of aircraft no longer required. This year 11 new Bell 206A Jet Rangers will be added to the fleet and acquisitions include Westcoast Helicopters Ltd. and Universal Helicopters, of Newfoundland.

To. Dominion

Assets in excess of $6 billion — up $587 million or 11 per cent since October — are reported for the six months ended April 30 by Toronto Domion Bank.

President A. T. Lambert points out the bank's deposits and assets have more than doubled in 5½ years.

Deposits in the half year rose by $576 million, but revenue and expenses were each lower, a reflection of lower interest rates on loans and deposits.

Balance of revenue in the period was $29.6 million vs. $27.2 million, and earnings were equated to 65.2 cents a share compared with 59 cents a year ago.

TSE

Toronto Stock Exchange has named its vice-chairman D. G. Lawson to be president for the coming year.

At the same time the exchange appointed Dr. O. M. Solandt, chairman of the Science Council of Canada, as one of two public members of the board of governors. The other is W. R. Allen, a lawyer for Kinross Mortgage Corp.

J. C. Barron, president of Cassels Blaikie and Co. Ltd., is the new vice-chairman. New governors are H. R. Bennett of Richardson Securities of Canada, and Kenneth A. Wright, vice-president and general manager of Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co. Ltd.

Consumer's

Consumers' Gas Co. reports net earnings for six months ended March 31 of $15.27 million or 84 cents a share, up from $14.96 million or 83 cents a share for the corresponding period last year.

Total revenue for the period was $108.8 million up from $101 million.

Figures do not include the purchase of Cygnus Corp., completed after March 31, which included control of Home Oil.

P & G

Proctor and Gamble Cellulose Ltd. has started construction on an $80 million kraft pulp mill which is to employ 1,000 persons at Grande Prairie, Alta.

The mill will be capable of producing 600 tons of fine kraft pulp a day and have an annual payroll of $4 million. Completion is scheduled for July, 1973.

A subsidiary of Proctor and Gamble of Cincinnati, the company will draw logs for the mill from eight million acres of timber land to the south of Grande Prairie. Mostly lodgepole pine will be used.

Westfair

Westfair Foods Ltd. of Winnipeg said net income for first 12 weeks of 1971 was $461,000, down from $497,000 for the same period last year.

The company's statement for the period ended March 27 said sales were $52.57 million compared with $53 million in 1970.

CDP Computer

CDP Computer Data Processors Ltd. lost $245,124 during the nine months ended March 31, compared with a loss of $227,193 in the period last year.

Substantial cost reductions resulted in a cash flow of $67,171, up from a loss of $195,362.

The company also reports three sales contracts worth $700,000 with three South American oil companies. Two are for computer programs used in oil and gas explorations, and all three are expected to be completed within a year.

Drilling Costs Soar In North Operation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Costs of drilling for oil in the Arctic are eight to 10 times that of conventional drilling in Alberta, the chairman of the board of Imperial Oil Ltd. said after the board met for the first time in British Columbia.

William O. Twaits said a 10,000-foot well in Alberta costs between $250,000 and $300,000 but the Blow River well, a dry hole drilled last fall in the MacKenzie Delta, cost $2.5 million. An offshore well in the Beaufort Sea might cost $4 million, he said.

As well as Frontier Oil Exploration, Imperial Oil is giving close study to its Voyageur restaurants, operated in conjunction with service stations on the open highway.

"We're expanding our coffee shops, and they're getting a lot of study right now," said J. A. Armstrong, Imperial Oil president.

"We're creating a food service and we find there is no way but to do it ourselves," said Twaits. "We can't lease it out, as a concession and we can't leave it to service station operators to manage."

LOOK TO FRONTIERS

The trend of exploratory drilling is to the frontiers, Twaits said, and this is part of a picture that will involve increasing costs.

"The whole industry is moving to the Northwest Territories, the Arctic islands and the continental shelves on the Atlantic, Arctic and Pacific coasts. But it's not the same kind of ball game we've been in. There is a great deal of technology to be developed."

On the question of getting oil from Prudhoe Bay on Alaska's north slope to market in the U.S., a controversial issue on the West Coast, Twaits said:

"We would be interested in having it go by a pipeline through Canada so we could piggyback on it if we ever get production in northern Canada.

WANTS PIPELINE

"But the Alyeska pipeline is in place. The pipe is on the ground waiting to be laid. And Alaska wants a pipeline just as I recall British Columbia did a few years ago.

"As for the concern about tankers on the B.C. coast, we have to decide whether we want to keep the house warm and provide fuel for industry and take some chances.

"Several studies have been made of the Santa Barbara coast in California, the Torrey Canyon tanker spill on the English coast and the Arrow tanker spill at Chedabucto Bay, N.S. They have found no permanent damage."

LABATT BUYS EAST BREWERY

HALIFAX (CP) — Oland and Son Ltd., one of Canada's oldest brewery firms, plans to sell a majority of its shares to John Labatt Ltd., of London, Ont., it was announced Thursday in a joint statement from the two companies.

Bruce S. Oland, president of the Halifax-based firm, and J. H. Moore, chairman of Labatt, said agreement in principle has been reached for the merger, but the deal must be approved by shareholders.

The Oland family holds 90 per cent of the shares in the brewery company, which opened business here in 1867. It operates its own brewery and a subsidiary, A. Keith and Son Ltd., in Halifax as well as an Oland brewery in Saint John, N. B.

Oland and Son has about 45 per cent of the annual $35 million market for beer in the three Maritime provinces.

Labatt, a subsidiary of Brascan Ltd. of Toronto, is a brewing and food product company that produces about one-third of the beer consumed in Canada.

Bruce Oland, who became president of the company in 1968 after his older brother, Victor, was appointed lieutenant-governor of Nova Scotia, declined to release financial details of the agreement with Labatt.

The announcement said Oland would continue as president if the merger is approved and that no changes would be made in the Oland's operations in the Maritimes.

Oland and Son traces its history back to the first year of Confederation when the Army and Navy Brewery was opened here by John James Dunn Oland and Francis DeWinton. That firm was sold to British interests at the turn of the century and Oland purchased another brewery.

His second brewery was destroyed in the Halifax explosion of 1917 and one year later the family bought a brewing plant in Saint John, N.B. It was not until 1925 that they went back into business here with government help.

It was the Oland company that put up $100,000 in the early 1960s to construct an exterior replica of the Bluenose, the famed Nova Scotia ffshing and racing schooner.

In recent years Bluenose II took tourists for daily trips off the harbor here, but Oland said earlier this year that the practice was being discontinued. He said from now on Bluenose II, would spend her time making courtesy calls at Maritime ports.

At the end of 1969, Oland and Son and its subsidiaries had fixed assets of $3.9 million and income from operations of $1.06 million.

Labatt sales from all divisions in the 1969-70 fiscal year totalled $388.8 million. Beverage sales — including breweries in Canada and the United States and wineries in Canada — account for about 55 per cent of the sales.

Labatt also produces a variety of food products and its subsidiaries include Laura Secord Candy Shops Ltd., Catelli-Habitant Ltd., the Ogilive Flour mills Co. Ltd. and McGavin Toastmaster Ltd.

Pulp Market Poor All Over

VANCOUVER (CP) — At least five of British Columbia's pulp mills will shut down operations for varying periods this summer because of a continuing world oversupply of their product.

Facing continued poor sales because of the sagging or stagnant economies of North America, Europe and the Orient, spokesmen for the industry say some workers will be laid off and others will be put on maintenance work. No precise figures are available on how many will be without pay.

Forest company executives are hopeful that the fourth quarter of this year may bring an improvement but the third quarter, traditionally bad for sales, is being written off.

A current softening of the pulp market has not generally produced a decrease in prices for kraft pulp, which recently has sold for $167 a ton for B.C. coastal varieties $169 for interior varieties, including insurance and freight, in New York.

Ian Barclay, president of B.C. Forest Products Ltd., who has just returned from a trip to Europe, says the pulp market situation is "poor all over." He says the market is "definitely waiting for an upturn in the economy" and an increase in demand.

"The situation is caused by economic forecasts not having taken into account the effects of the economic slump.

"Until late last fall, we were all under the impression that 1971 and 1972 looked as if there would be a virtual balance between demand and supply," Barclay said.

"Because of the economic slump, people bought fewer paper products. They started using cotton or linen towels instead of paper ones, for example."

The United States downturn had a serious effect on producers all over the world. "Big companies who in good times use all their own production and buy some now have a surplus which they are selling in the world market in competition with B.C. firms.

"A swing of one or two per cent in paper and board use in the U.S. has a dramatic effect on the market. Seasoned buyers in Europe told me they never recall a time when the three major pulp and paper producing parts of the world were hit at the same time."

Nader 'A Social Quack'

TORONTO (CP) — George Sinclair, chairman and president of MacLaren Advertising Co., has termed "social quackery" the activities of Ralph Nader and other critics of big business.

Sinclair made the comment at a meeting of the Canadian section of the Oil Industry Tires Batteries and Accessories Group, the same organization to which Nader was to speak.

Nader is a Washington lawyer and self-appointed crusader for consumer rights.

"If you want to make your reputation today, you simply have to be a professional fault-finder," said Sinclair.

"The situation is made to order for the social quack, the person whose personal vanity leads him to diagnose the world's ills and prescribe for them."

RECORD SPEED IN TRIALS

SURPRISE POLE-SITTER

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The month of May has seen record speeds, innovations in aero-dynamics and electronics and a surprise pole sitter at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The story will be completed Saturday with the 55th running of the Indy 500.

Thirty-three cars will begin the race at 10 a.m. EDT with Peter Revson of New York, in his bright orange Team McLaren Mark 16, on the pole.

Revson surprised favored Mark Donohue two weeks ago by edging the boyish-faced graduate engineer for the inside spot on the first row with an average speed for the four-lap trial of 178.696 miles an hour. Donohue's speed, good enough for the middle of the first row, was 177.087.

Filling out the front row is Bobby Unser who drove his Eagle-Offenhauser to an average of 175.816.

Donohue, who became the first and only man to average more than 180 m.p.h. on a lap around the 2½-mile track, remains the co-favorite along with three-time winner A. J. Foyt, Houston, Tex.

The three men who have won the 500 since the last of Foyt's three 500 victories in 1967 will all be starting the race in the first three rows of the 11-row field.

Bobby Unser won the race in 1968. His younger brother, Al, the pole-sitter and winner last year, will start between Foyt and Revson's team-mate, Denis Hulme of New Zealand, in the second row.

Mario Andretti, who won the 1969 race, will start on the outside of the third row with his new German-built McNamara-Ford specially built for Andy Granatelli's team.

This year's starting field of 33 cars averaged 171.665 miles an hour in qualifying, 4.526 m.p.h. faster than last year's starters. Only nine cars did not qualify with speeds over 170.

BRUINS CAPTURE FOUR OF SIX ALL-STAR BERTHS

MONTREAL (CP) — Four high-scoring Boston Bruins won places on the National Hockey League all-star team announced today while New York Rangers provided the goalkeeper and Montreal Canadiens took a defence spot.

Defenceman Boby Orr and centre Phil Esposito — of the Bruins were unanimous picks. Joining them were Boston teammates right-winger Ken Hodge and left-winger John Bucyk, goalkeeper Ed Giacomin of New York and defenceman Jean-Claude Tremblay of Montreal.

Runners-up in the voting were goaltender Jacques Plante of Toronto Maple Leafs, defenceman Brad Park of New York and Pat Stapleton of Chicago, centre Dave Keon of Toronto, right-winger Yvan Cournoyer of Montreal and left-winger Bobby Hull of Chicago.

Each member of the all stars receives $2,000 from the NHL while runners-up receive $1,000.

There was a rare tie for the defence position with Tremblay and Park each gaining 121 points in the poll among members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association in the 14 NHL cities.

★ ★ ★

Tremblay was awarded the first-team berth since he collected more first-place votes than Park. Tremblay had a 14 to 11 edge.

Points were awarded on the basis of five for a first-place choice, three for a second and one for a third.

The appearance of four Bruins on the first team marked the first time in the 41-year history of the league that Boston has had four players named to the first team and the 13th time one team has had as many players selected to the first team.

It is only the fourth time one team has had all three forward positions on the first team.

For the first time in 16 years, Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings is not a member of all star team or a runner-up and for the first time in eight years Hull is not on the first team.

Esposito is making his third straight appearance on the first team and Orr his fourth. Tremblay was a runner-up in 1967-68.

This is short-order day, or look for the next major league baseball expansion to include Japan. It appears inevitable that with the coming of supersonic air travel, Tokyo will be the next stop along the line. Baseball already is a major sport in the land of the rising sun, and the Japanese would like nothing better than to test their skills competitively against the best in the U.S.

The game already is a best-seller . . . the Tokyo Giants, reigning champions, drew two and one-half million customers last year, which works out to a game average of 38,000 . . . and if the Japanese aren't quite prepared for the final question, they do try harder than their American counterparts even now . . . for instance they start out each baseball day with 40 minutes of calisthenics which is followed by a two to three-hour batting drill . . . Only then do they get down to the business at hand of playing the game . . . Yes, they'll be ready when the SST is . . . Who says so? . . . Walter Alston, manager of the Dodgers, that's who . . . "They play a pretty good brand of ball right now," he said recently . . . "and with major league competition they would improve that much more."

Meanwhile, the place NOT to be on Oct. 16 and Oct. 23 is the PNE parking lot in Vancouver. The Vancouver Canucks and the B.C. Lions each have games scheduled on those nights . . . the Canucks start at 5 p.m. and the Lions at 8 p.m. There should be a merry mix-up indeed when the departing hockey fans, all 15,000 of them, meet the arriving football faithful, 30,000 strong . . . GM Bud Poile of the Canucks asked for a schedule switch but could not be accommodated . . . To the caller who asked, yes, Art Jackson, former Toronto Maple Leaf, died earlier this month . . . he was 55 . . . and so did Barney Stanley, a member of the Vancouver Millionaires when they won the Stanley Cup in 1915 . . . And it may have passed unnoticed, but Lew Elder, former racing partner of Torchy Peden, and an Olympic competitor in 1928, died recently in Lindsay, Ont. . . .

The latest advisory on the B.C. Salmon Derby in Vancouver (Aug. 14-15) is that the prize list already has passed the $50,000 mark and is still climbing . . . 12,000 fishermen took part last year which was an increase of 50 per cent over the previous derby . . . it's getting so nobody can afford to miss it . . . In the fact, not fantasy, department, is the advice that Scotty Bowman already has signed with Montreal Canadiens . . . he was supposed to be the new coach, but Al MacNeil has staked a prior claim . . . After all, he did win the Stanley Cup, which he wasn't supposed to do . . . Clarence Campbell, it has been said in Montreal, has been using his office of league president to put in a good word for MacNeil . . . last year, after Boston Bruins won the Stanley Cup, coach Harry Sinden decided the salary offered wasn't adequate for the position, and quit . . . if MacNeil does likewise or is pushed, hockey's image will suffer, Campbell has implied . . . Then, too, Joe Crozier has taken off for somewhere . . . the wise money says Buffalo, except for the buzz that hints Emile Francis is seeking a coach for the Rangers . . . it is not illogical to suggest that Crozier may stop by and visit Francis when he is in the east . . .

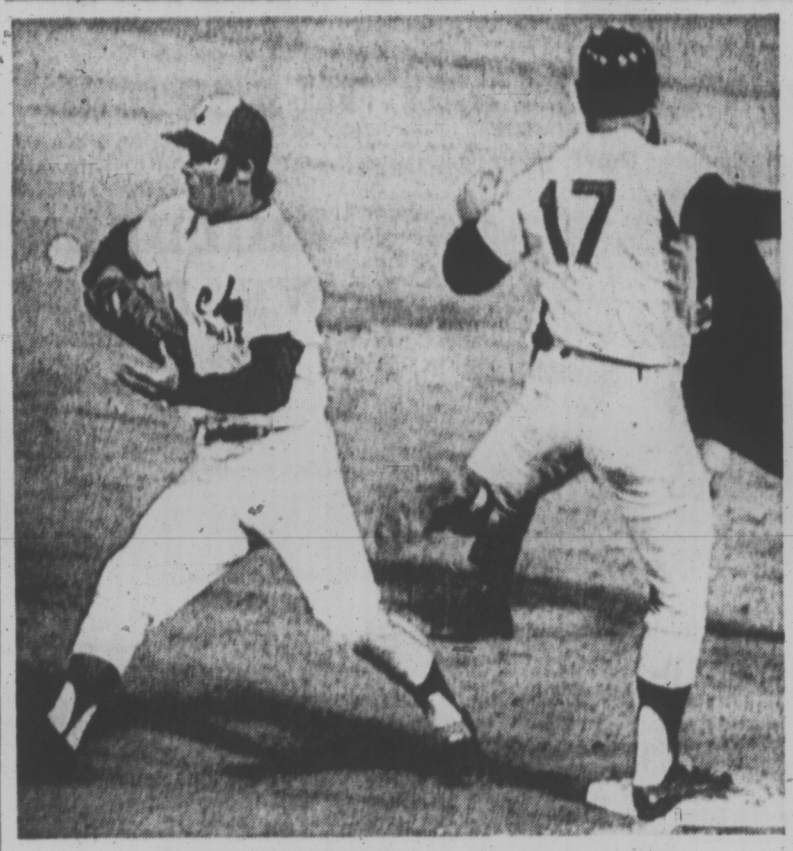
And if you wonder why fishing is sometimes bad, study this pollutant . . . enough oil and petroleum products to provide 75 million cars with 20 gallons of gasoline each were spilled on the waters of the world last year . . . all the horrid details can be found in the May Issue of Audubon . . . and yes, Elizabeth, the Souvenir Trade Dollar, sponsored by the Festival of Sports, is sound in its concept, and basically is a means to provide revenue for B.C. amateur sports activities . . . auto racing's Bing Foster is back in the haberdashery business . . . he's the big in big and tall . . . rugby enthusiasts may be interested to learn that the famed Wallabies will play in Victoria this fall following a tour of France . . . and remember Hub Kittle? . . . old timers will recall the former Western International League performer . . . he now is a coach with Houston . . . and if auto racing, as reported, drew more fans than any other sport in the U.S. last year, it isn't exactly the whole truth . . . the estimated total of 69,322,725 represents 24 per cent of the total attendance surveyed, with horse racing second and football third . . . that's what the report says . . . but if the trotters are added to the thoroughbreds, and it seems only fair, then that's a horse of a different color, to which 74 million fans will testify . . . but auto sport is gaining, and fast . . !



THE CAMERA NEVER LIES

This picture was worth 10,000 words Thursday at Montreal during National League game between Expos and Atlanta Braves, who took 4-1 victory. First-base umpire Ken Burkhardt called Atlanta's Felix Millan (17) out on this play, sparking lengthy rhubarb with Braves. Ron Fairley, who did not complain, is shown with foot well off bag and bobbling ball while Millan is crossing base. (CP Wirephoto)

Indians Crush Orioles Red Sox Boost AL Lead

By The Associated Press

Ten little Indians eager for a score touched all the bases in Baltimore.

"Gosh it's good to beat that ball club once in awhile," manager Alvin Dark said Thursday night after his Cleveland Indians overran the Orioles 10-5 with a 17-hit spree.

It was the first victory for the Indians in four games against Baltimore this season. Last year the world champions thumped Cleveland 14 times in 18 meetings.

In other American League action, Detroit Tigers nipped New York Yankees 4-3, Milwaukee Brewers topped Minnesota Twins 5-3 and Boston Red Sox downed Washington Senators 6-2.

Reggie Smith and Rico Petrocelli homered for the Red Sox and pitcher Gary Peters cracked a two-run single as the East Division leaders went three games up on second-place Baltimore.

Ted Uhlaender paced Cleveland against six Baltimore pitchers with three hits and four runs batted in. His two-run single off Tom Dukes in the sixth inning snapped a 4-4 tie, enabling right-hander Steve Dunning to nail his fourth straight victory and fifth in seven decisions with last-inning relief help from Phil Hennigan.

BOBBLES AND HOMERS

Frank Robinson, whose two-base error keyed a three run Cleveland third that sent the Indians ahead 4-0, doubled home two runs as the Orioles scored four times in the fifth to knot it.

But Uhlaender's bases-loaded single put the Indians on top to stay in the sixth.

Mickey Lolich weathered successive fourth inning homers by New York's Bobby Murcer and Johnny Ellis, then pitched out of a ninth inning jam to bring his record to 8-3 as the Tigers posted their eighth victory in nine games.

In the National League, Lou Brock, St. Louis' streaking left fielder, cracked three hits Thursday night to stretch his batting string to 23 games as the Cardinals decked Chicago Cubs 10-0.

In the night's other action, Atlanta Braves beat Montreal Expos 4-1, Pittsburgh Pirates topped Cincinnati Reds 5-2 and Los Angeles Dodgers trimmed San Francisco Giants 5-1.

Brock's streak takes up where team-mate Joe Torre's left off. Torre hit in 22 straight games prior to the start of the Brock charge.

TELFORD SELECTED TO TEAM

The team will play Bermuda on Sunday in the first game of preliminary competition leading to the 1974 World Cup in West Germany.

Telford, a left back, was one of eight B.C. players selected for the 16-man team Thursday after a 14-day training camp at Canadian Forces Base Borden.

★ ★ ★

The other provincial representatives are Buzz Parsons of Eintracht, Bill Young of Paul's Canadians, Sergio Zanatta, Sam Lenarduzzi and goalkeeper Peter Greco of Columbus, Len Brown of Croatia and Gary Thompson of the University of B.C. Thunderbirds.

After Canada meets Mexico in Mexico City on June 8, there will be return games in Toronto against Bermuda on June 13 and in Vancouver against Mexico on Aug. 24.

The team will also travel to Cali, Colombia, to take part in the Pan-American Games which open July 30.

MEET CARDED AT ESQUIMALT

More than 200 athletes are expected to compete in an Esquimalt all-comers track and field meet Saturday at Esquimalt Senior Secondary School.

B.C. record holders are scheduled to take part on the program, which commences at 11 a.m. The meet is primarily for senior athletes aiming at Pan-American Games standards.

Grand-Slam Blow Helps Six Mile

Ray Clements slugged a grand-slam home run Thursday in an Industrial Men's Softball League game at Macdonald Park, but it wasn't enough as Paine Construction lost to first-place Six-Mile House, 11-9.

Ingraham Hotel lost 2-4 to London Boxing and Kings Hotel edged Pickups, 7-3, in other league encounters.

Flyers Fire Stasiuk

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League fired head coach Vic Stasiuk Friday and asked the former playing star to remain with the club as a scout.

"It was something I hated to do," said general manager Keith Allen in announcing the dismissal, "but I felt it was something that had to be done for the good of the team."

Stasiuk, who has one year remaining on a two-year contract, said he was completely surprised by the firing and asked for more time to decide whether or not he would remain with the Flyers, who finished third last season in the NHL's Western Division.

Swanson Pitches Perfect Game

All—the opposition saw all night was zeroes as Bob Swanson tossed the first perfect game of the season and Bate Construction whitewashed Seaboard Construction 4-0 in a Major Men's League encounter at Central Park.

Swanson struck out at least one man per inning, 12 of the 21 batters who faced him.

All four Bates runs came in the fourth inning with a home run by Doug Boden, a two-run double by Don Lancaster and an error which scored Ray Seabrooke.

Bell's Grab Share Of McGinnis Lead

Bell's Men's Wear jumped into a share of first place in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League by edging Gilmour Construction 5-3 at Heywood Avenue Park Thursday.

Jim Anderson hit a two-run homer and Gary Liebel added a solo blast as Bell's led off with a 3-0 lead in the first inning. In the fourth inning Bob Brown singled home two insurance runs.

Gilmour scored in the second on Phil Botterill's sacrifice fly and added two unearned runs in the fifth.

Obligations Fulfilled, Al Rollins Leaves Jets

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Spokane Jets' coach Al Rollins has been named coach-general manager of the Salt Lake City Golden Eagles of the Western Hockey League.

Rollins, a former NHL goaltender, looked on his new assignment as a challenge "because they've (Salt Lake) finished on the bottom the last two years."

★ ★ ★

Rollins piloted the Jets to three Western International League crowns, two British Columbia Savage Cups and the Allan Cup for the 1969-70 season.

"In three years I did for them what I promised to do," Rollins said about the Jets. "They were badly in debt when I came, and this year they were able to pay a dividend to the stockholders. I think I can say I fulfilled my obligations to the best of my ability."

Salt Spring Sailpast Opens Capital City Season

While the Swiftwure boats are doing their thing in the Strait of Juan de Fuca this weekend members of the Capital City Yacht Club will be having their own annual celebration.

As in past years, they will be opening the new season with a sailpast during the Swiftsure weekend.

This year it will be staged at Long Harbor on Salt Spring Island with commodore Dave Sharpe faking the salute in his cruiser Ono.

Racing for cruising class boats of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club was out Wednesday night as many of the boats were being readied for Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca.

Other classes competed as usual with 14 Cal 20s and the same number of Thunderbirds racing it out around the buoys.

Bob Grundison's Owl was the big winner in Thunderbirds, beating out John Malleson's Sunday, Dave Anstey's Hussy II, John Booth's Umpka, Dave Carere's Chincook, Ian Stewart's Ahoo-Ya and Gordie Nickells' Redskin.

★ ★ ★

Owl also earned top honors on the weekend when the Thunderbird fleet sailed five races in an elimination series to determine which seven boats will represent the area when the Thunderbird world championships are held here in July.

She finished up 6½ points ahead of second-placer Sunday. The next five boats and remainder of the Victoria fleet representatives are Umpka, Hussy II, Rod McBride's Lemolo, Redskin and Ahoo-Ya.

Peter Barber's Tongariro won first place in Cal 20s Wednesday, being followed by Sue North's Pegasus, Nancy Lovett's Red Baron, John Readshaw's Massilia, Rosemary Brimacombe's Skua, Art MacGregor's Ookpik and Murray Farmer's Aeolus.

Other results were:

X-Class Dinghies—1, Doug Gray; 2, Walter Roots; 3, Chris Metten; 4, Peter Simpson.

El Toros—1, Ian Pickles; 2, David Pickles; 3, Jeff McBride.

Fireballs—1, Dave Richardson; 2, Peter Smith.

OK Dinghies—1, Philip Huggett; 2, Andrew Burton.

Another night of series racing was also sailed by members of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, on Wednesday.

Tony Sayle and Roger Vale placed first and second in both races sailed by C-Flys.

Jeannie Whitby placed first and second in two Fireball races. Behind her in the first race were Vince Martorino, who came third in the next race, and Leo Politano.

Bill Whitby edged his daughter for first place in the last race.

Mike Weir won both races in the 420 class and Mel Steffens won two consistent thirds. Derek Bissell trailed Weir in the first race and Norm Burke repeated Bissell's performance in the second.

Six Sailerettes were on the start line for their Wednesday night race which was won by Fred Douglas' Black Hawk. Margaret Dick's Silver Heron came second and Peter Vieweg's Blue Goose captured a third spot.

SHORT TACKS—Turkey Head Sailing Association's special Victorian Days race Tuesday resulted in 18 boats giving their crews plenty of practice in spinnaker drill—but no satisfaction. Because of light air none was able to finish in the time limit. For the same reason, 12 Royal Vic. boats called it a day Sunday when they were unable to complete a race from Cadboro Bay to Bedwell Harbor.

Bowler in Largest Group Elected to Hall of Fame

TORONTO (CP) — A world champion bowler and a veteran golfer still active were among a record 14 persons named Thursday to Canada's Sports Hall of Fame.

In announcing the newcomers to the Hall in a release by W. Harold Rea, chairman of the Hall of Fame's board of governors, the selection committee noted that the unusually large number stems from a backlog of nominations "and the outstanding talents and contributions made to this country by those in the nomination lists."

The 14 named this year are the largest group elected in any one year since the Hall's inception in 1955.

Graydon "Blondie" Robinson of Toronto earned automatic recognition for capturing the world 10-pin bowling championship at Tokyo in 1969. This is the last year a world championship qualifies as automatic entry into the Sports Hall of Fame.

Nick Weslock, Windsor, Ont.-born golfer, is still at 54 one of the world's outstanding amateurs and a perennial contender for amateur golf laurels in Canada.

Included in the list were three in the builders category who contributed to the growth of sports, both amateur and professional: Tommy Ryan of Toronto, founder of five-pin bowling; Charles Mayer of Montreal who was active in many sports programs as writer, broadcaster and administrator, and Bill Simpson of Toronto as soccer administrator and player.

Elected as competitors were:

Donald Bain, Winnipeg, one of Manitoba's best all-round athletes;

Speedskater Fred Robson, Toronto;

Swimers Phyllis Dewar Lowery, Moose Jaw, Sask., and Elaine Tanner, Vancouver;

Noel MacDonald, centre star and captain of the world-famous Edmonton Grads girls' basketball team;

George Chenier, Ottawa, longtime North American snooker champion;

Harry Jerome, Vancouver, Bill Crothers, Toronto and Eric Coy, Winnipeg, all for their contributions to track and field.

Chenier, Bain, Robson and Mrs. Lowery are dead.

ELAINE TANNER

Miss Tanner earned the name Mighty Mouse for her accomplishments in the water and in 1966, at 15, was named Canada's outstanding athlete, pro or amateur, with good reason.

During that year's Commonwealth Games in Jamaica, she collected seven medals — four gold and three silver in both individual and team events. In her brief obimeteoric career, Miss Tanner held several world records in assorted categories — butterfly, freestyle and backstroke.

But the one that eluded her was a gold in the Olympics although she was runner-up at Mexico City in 1968 in both the 100 metre and 200 metre backstroke events.

Noel MacDonald's feats on a basketball court are still recalled by those who followed the Edmonton team during its heydays in the 1930s.

BILL CROTHERS

He ran for Canada in three Olympics — 1960, 1964 and 1968 — and in all Pan-American Games from 1959 through 1968.

Crothers, long one of the world's top half-milers and a silver medalist in the 1964 Tokyo Olympics, finally emerged at the zenith of his specialty by defeating world champion Peter Snell of New Zealand before 19,000 at Toronto's Varsity Stadium in 1965.

SEVERAL WORLD TITLES

Her talents led the Grads to several world championships and it was only when she decided to quit that the Grads suddenly folded.

Coy was one of Canada's outstanding track and field men during the 1930s and 1940s, specializing in discus, shot put and javelin.

Jerome and Crothers are of a more recent era. Jerome as a sprinter and Crothers in middle-distance running.

Jerome became the first native Canadian to officially hold a world track record when, at 19, he ran the 100 metres at 10 seconds to become co-holder of the mark with Germany's Armin Hary. He also shared the world mark at 100 yards and in the 440-yard relay.

Weslock Champ Four Times

Robinson was 41 when he turned in his championship performance against bowlers from 34 countries, becoming the oldest competitor ever to win the world title.

The two-time Canadian champion staged a dramatic final with Ut Lenavat of Thailand, finishing with four straight strikes to defeat the Thai by six pins.

Weslock, who now makes his home in Burlington, Ont., has been a member of Ontario's Willingdon Cup golf team 21 times, including 11 straight years from 1957 through 1967.

He has been Canadian amateur champion a record four times, Ontario champ eight times, Ontario seniors champion three times, Ontario Open champion seven times, a member of Canada's international America's Cup team six times, on the Canadian World Cup team three times and was a member of Canada's Commonwealth team four times.

Ryan, acknowledged founder of five-pin bowling, was too busy in 1908 to patent the idea. He settled for watching it grow into a recreational pastime enjoyed by millions.

Because of the time involved and the energy spent in wielding a 16-pound ball, Ryan reasoned that fewer pins would speed up the game and a lighter ball would lessen the fatigue.

Mayer has been a prominent voice in Quebec sports for almost a half century as journalist, broadcaster, author and administrator.

He is, or has been, affiliated with various posts in horse racing and in charge of minor National Hockey League officials for 20 years.

Scottish-born Simpson played and coached soccer in the Toronto area and was president of the Toronto and District league for 16 years before resigning in 1965.

He served as secretary-treasurer of the Ontario Soccer Association for 17 years, was president of the Canadian Football Soccer Association for four years, and served as Canada's representative to the Federation of International Football Associations.

Cenier Learned Snooker as Bellhop

Chenier, born in 1907, learned his trade while employed as a bellhop in Detroit then applied his prowess on a world-wide basis while living variously in Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver and Victoria.

Considered one of the five top pocket billiard players in the world, Chenier held the North American snooker title from 1948 until his death just before Christmas, 1970.

Though born in Belleville, Ont., in 1894, Bain moved with his family to Winnipeg six years later and began to make his mark at 13 by winning the province's three-mile roller skating championship.

He successively won the all-round gymnastics title in Manitoba, figure-skating championships in both Manitoba and Saskatchewan, Canadian trapshooting championship and was outstanding in lacrosse, snowshoeing, golf and hockey.

As a hockey player, he played on two Stanley Cup Championship teams with Winnipeg Victorias (1896 and 1901) without relinquishing his amateur status.

Robson held nine world speedskating records, a Canadian speedskating mark and was the Canadian barrel-jumping record holder. His running high jump on skates of four feet, two inches was just one inch below the world's best.

Mrs. Lowery was 18 in August, 1934, when she set four British Empire Games swim marks at London, England, including individual freestyle records at 100 and 440 yards. Her team marks were in the medley relay and relay.

As Phyllis Dewar, she was named Canada's outstanding female athlete in 1934.

Moryson Takes Playoff For B.C. Pro Golf Title

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tommy Moryson captured the British Columbia Professional Golfers Association championship Thursday by upsetting defending-champion Doug Reid on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff at the Point Grey course.

The two players, who finished the regulation 36-hole turnament with 142 totals, both played the first extra hole in par figures. Then Moryson came through a birdie.

Moryson, a 21-year-old professional playing out of the Pitt Meadows golf club, forced the playoff with an eagle three on the 18th hole. His second shot wound up just 18 inches from the par-five hole. It gave him a 70 to go with an opening round 72.

Reid, an unattached pro from Burnaby, wound up with a 73 after three-putting the 18th green. He was the first-round leader with a 69.

Moryson's win was worth $300. Reid collected $250.

Roy Stone of Trail shot a 70 Thursday for a 147 total and the title for players 50 and over. He collected $128.

John Morgan, an unattached pro from Victoria, and Dave Ewart of Port Alberni headed the Island contingent, with 147 totals. Mike Rivers of Nanaimo finished with 156, Bob Hammer of Victoria and Dick Silverberg of Glen Meadows Club, Sidney were at 157 and Earl Davies of Victoria Gorge and Greg Palmer of Nanaimo at 159.

The top 15 were:

Tom Moryson	72-70—142
Doug Reid	69-73—142
Gordie Fairbairn	71-73—144
Ron Willey	71-74—145

Another Tie For Greaves

Another Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game has ended in a stalemate. A contest between Gorge Hotel and Greaves Movers was tied at 2-2 when called on account of darkness Thursday at Royal Athletic Park.

Darkness halted a game between Greaves and Al's Home Service at 4-4 after seven innings Wednesday night.

Greaves and Gorge will complete the game prior to their next scheduled encounter, at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

British Amateurs Surge to Cup Win

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — A former pro, a teenager and the son of an Irish golfing great sparked a string of six straight singles matches Thursday that brought Britain its first Walker Cup victory over the United States since 1938.

The British were trailing 10-7 when they started the string that gained them a 13-11 victory, only their second in 23 meetings of this famed amateur golf competition between the two countries.

Hugh Stuart, a former Scottish pro reinstated as an amateur, started Britain's winning run by beating Marvin (Vinnie) Giles of Richmond, Va., 2 and 1.

Then 19-year-old Warren Humphreys, youngest player in the competition, edged Steve Melnyk, former U.S. amateur king from Jacksonville, Fla., 2 and 1, and Charlie Green of Scotland evened the match at 10-10 by beating Allen Miller of Pensacola, Fla., on the final hole.

Britain took the lead on the next singles when 20-year-old Roddy Carr, son of Irish star Joe Carr, who won three British Amateurs, sank a 30-foot putt on the final hole to nip Jim Simons of Butler, Pa.

George MacGregor followed with a one-up victory over Jim Gabrielson of Atlanta, then David Marsh clinched the Cup by beating veteran Bill Hyndman of Philadelphia 1-up.

In the final match, Tom Kite of Austin, Tex., topped Geoff Marks, 3 and 2.

"This is the most amazing day in my life," said British captain Michael Bonallack. "I was convinced this team could win and in the end they did it despite their captain."

U.S. Amateur champion Lanny Wadkins of Richmond, Va., ripped Bonallack, 3 and 1, in the first singles of the day.

The U.S. team won two of four foursomes and tied a third in the morning to take a 9-7 lead.

The results of the foursomes:

Melnyk and Giles defeated Charlie Green and Marks, 1-up.

Miller and John Farquhar, Amarillo, Tex., defeated Bonallack and David Marsh, 5 and 4.

Stuart and Carr defeated Wadkins and Gabrielsen, 1-up.

Bill Campbell, Huntington, W. Va., and Kite drew with Rodney Foster and Scott McDonald.

Family Duo Falls In Tennis Semis

One fall may have led to another, for mother-daughter combination Felicity and Faith Graham in women's doubles competition match in the annual Victoria zone tennis tournament.

Top seeds in the events, the pair was favored to beat Sally Wood and Wendy Cuppage — until Faith fell and broke her ankle Wednesday.

Her younger sister Heather substituted and in Thursday's semi-final fought hard, but the family combination lost 4-6, 6-2 and 6-3 to the Wood-Cuppage duo.

Nancy Hill and Ruth Trelawney took the other semi-final, 6-2 and 6-0, over Sheila Levey and Kay Woodland.

In men's doubles semi-finals, top seeded Tim Cummings and Ivor Goodmanson defeated Ted Davies and Glen Bradshaw, 6-2, 5-7 and 6-0. In the only game today, Trevor Jones and Dave Tooby meet John Nichol and Bob Hutton in men's doubles semi-final at Oak Bay Tennis Club.

Centennial Mood Set At Wrenette Parade

Watched by hundreds of parent and friends, the Patricia Dufour Navy League Wrenette Corps strode through its paces at its annual inspection Thursday at Navy League headquarters on Robert.

Setting the centennial mood, inspecting officer Cmdr. E. K. Lee, commanding officer of HMCS Malahat, wore the cocked hat and frock coat uniform worn by naval officers in the old days.

Also in the inspecting party were Mrs. George Dufour, national chairman for Wrenettes; Bill George, vice-president of the Navy League's Vancouver Island division, and Bill Ross, local president.

TWO AWARDS

During the evening the corps was presented with two national Navy League awards.

One was the national Wrenette marksmanship trophy for rifle shooting and the other, the proficiency trophy for best Wrenette corps on the Island.

Also received was the runner-up trophy, won when the corps' rifle team competed in the Brigadier Adams competition, open to all cadet corps and Wrenette corps on Vancouver Island.

OW Anna Marie Micks received the women's auxiliary to the Navy League's proficiency award.

Her three sisters also earned honors. PO Sharon Micks won the most co-operative award of the ex-service women's branch 182, Royal Canadian Legion; OW Margaret Micks received the attendance award of the ladies' auxiliary, Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada. OW Helen Micks also received an attendance award.

OTHER WINNERS

PO Shannon Akins won two awards — the Patricia Dufour Marksmanship Trophy and the Royal Canadian Legion's award for most efficient senior wrenette.

Also receiving awards were: OW Linda Murray, most improved wrenette; OW Sheila Lekivetz, most efficient junior wrenette; and OW Ramona Ratchford, most co-operative junior wrenette.

Soviets Jail Latvian Jews

MOSCOW (AP) — Four Latvian Jews were convicted here of "anti-Soviet slander" at the end of a closed trial in Riga. The court imposed prison sentences ranging from one year to three years.

Reporting the verdict, Tass news agency said the "criminal group" had been convicted of reprinting "anti-Soviet publications from Tel Aviv and duplicating other slanderous materials."

The stiffest term, a three-year sentence, was imposed on Arkady Shpilberg, who protested in court that he was being tried simply because he wanted to go to Israel.

Services Integrated

CALGARY (CP) — The town of High Level, 375 miles northwest of Edmonton, will be the site of pilot project for integrated delivery of social services, Social Development Minister Ray Speaker said Thursday. The hospital, dental care, social work, public health, preventive social services and the home care program will be placed under the jurisdiction of one local board, he said.

AMCHITKA HEARINGS

AEC Warned of Possible Disaster

Two representatives of a Victoria-based group protesting the proposed nuclear test blast set for October on Amchitka Island presented briefs today at a hearing in Anchorage, Alaska.

Kurt Horn, president of the Cowichan-Malahat branch of the Society for Pollution and Environment Control, and Seiichi Tanaka, a graduate student in nuclear physics at the University of Victodia and a Japanese citizen, made their presentations to the Atomic Energy Commission on behalf of Amchitka 2.

Horn's brief emphasized the danger of a disaster occurring as a result of the planned blast while Tanaka dealt with the possibilities of radiation poisoning.

EARTHQUAKES?

Horn told the hearing: "When drug companies plan to market a product, they should be required to demonstrate that it is safe for human use. Considering the relatively enormous consequences of the proposed test should even one of the several possible dangerous consequences actually occur, then that principle ought to be applied with even greater force.

"Can the AEC be certain that the proposed test will not create earthquakes, tidal waves, or releases of radioactive material into the environment? When the results can be so catastrophic and irreversible, why then should the proposed test be permitted to proceed?"

Horn went on to warn of the possibility of earthquakes and tidal waves occurring after the blast.

"The unstable seismic conditions which prevail along the Pacific rim often manifest themselves in earthquakes and tidal waves, some of them, fresh to the memory of Alaskans and Californians, of catastrophic proportions.

NOT POSSIBLE

"It is, of course, not possible to claim absolutely that quakes distant from the test site can be triggered by underground testing in the earthquake belt, nor is it possible to state absolutely that they cannot be."

Horn said his should be viewed particularly in the ligst of the unprecedented magnitude of the blast — five megatons — which the AEC plans for Amchitka. He also brought up the possibility of cumulative effects from the 1969 blast — just over one megaton — combined with the October blast.

It was noted that there is an "enormous collecion of radioactive wastes" stored at Hanford, Wash., as well as a reactor-producer in operation there, both on the same earthquake belt as Amchitka. "We could be faced with almost incalculable radiation danger by the physical disruption of this area by marked tremors."

EARTH FAULTS

Horn's brief said: "We of Amchitka 2 believe that the United States has to respect not only the territorial integrity of Canada but its environmental integrity as well. When earth fault lines, water and air currents extend over national boundaries, then it is a violation of environmental sovereignty for one government to pursue activities which can create irreparable damage to the livelihoods of people who live in another country and which can result in the loss of health and lives.

"Now that the United States and the Soviet Union may be undertaking means to limit or reduce nuclear warhead development, let the U.S. demonstrate the seriousness of its intentions by cancelling the Amchitka test as a first step."

Tanaka told the hearing: "As human beings the scientists must think of the effects they are having on our world and the world of our children. I want to ask you to think again whether your work will aid human beings or destroy them; and if you conclude that your study contributes to the devastation of humanity, please have the courage to stop this activity.

EXPERIMENTATION

"In the course of all scientific experimentation we know there is the risk of accident and we must accept these risks. But why must we accept these risks in developing nuclear weapons?

"These tests do not contribute to the progress or peace of humanity. In the case of nuclear weapons testing we cannot see the expression of love for mankind or any profit to human advancement. Today the use of human beings as experimental animals is frowned upon.

"Although the AEC might have considered various dangers in the Amchitka test, to the Japanese people one of the most important dangers is sea pollution because in large part we live on sealife through fisheries. Japanese consume per capita five times as much seafood as north Americans and Japanese fishermen fish in waters surrounding the Amchitka test site."

Tanaka made his presentation in Japanese with an English translation available to the hearing officers.

The two delegates will report on the hearing and response from the AEC at a public meeting at St. Andrew's Cathedral Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

NEW HIGHWAY CONFUSES

Fine Mix-Up in Bazan Bay Jaunt

By ELIZABETH FORBES

If there was anything I would have bet as a sure thing in my comings and goings on the Saanich Peninsula, it was that I knew the turn-off to Bazan Bay near Sidney and that I also knew how to get from Sidney to Patricia Bay.

Forbes

At least I would have bet it as a sure thing until last Sunday when I got hopelessly lost and ended up a confused woman. Sunday as you will remember was a perfect early summer day, so tempting weather-wise three of us dcided to take off in my car for an afternoon on the beach.

When we started there was a light breeze from the southwest, so we headed for Bazan Bay.

As everyone knows the main highway out the Saanich Peninsula is being rejuvenated. Near Victoria the work has reached a stage where you can see where you are going. Out farther, great mounds of earth still obscure the view and direction signs are practically non-existent.

NO ALARM

As far back as I can remember the turn-off to Bazan Bay has been at a junction point where roads led off from the main highway, not only to the bay but also to the airport and across to West Saanich.

I knew that junction so well the mounds of earth and lack of signs didn't alarm me. There was only one twinge of doubt as we swished by what looked like a new turn-off about a mile or so this side of the junction. We glimpsed it at its point of departure from the highway and as quickly lost it behind a rampart of rubble and earth.

"That's the turn-off", said one of my companions. "No, it isn't . . . the turn-off is up ahead," said the other. Sure!" I answered in an I've-travelled-this-road - too - many times - to - be - fooled tone of voice. "It's around the next bend."

DISAPPEARED

Around the next bend however, the junction and the turn-off had disappeared. All that remained was another mountain of rock and soil that effectively barred us from the old way to Bazan Bay.

"Where's it gone," one friend wondered out loud. "It's back there" said the other with a definite hint of I-told-you-so.

By then we were high-tailing it along the highway and heading for the ferry terminal at Swartz Bay. A mile or so from Sidney we did manage to turn right on a crossroad that took us out opposite the Anacortes ferry wharf and we doubled back to the end of Bazan Bay where the beach offers a secluded area for picnics.

CHILLY

When we got there the wind had changed to the southeast and a slight mist was drifting ashore. "Chilly!" said one of our trio. "Cold!" said the other. "Let's go across to the Saanich Inlet side," I glibly suggested.

We started back through Sidney with thought of turning off about a mile north on the main highway where a cross-road has always taken us out to the historic little Patricia Bay church.

Again we were stymied. Now you cannot turn left off the highway at that road. The way is barred, and before you reach the next left turn you are down near the ferry docks.

That way you end up close to Deep Cove and you must double back to Patricia Bay.

Eventually, of course, the mountains of rubble and earth will disappear, signs will be up and the highway will be neat and tidy again.

In the meantime, if you wish to save wear and tear on your nerves, take my advice, go right into Sidney and double back if you're looking for Bazan Bay and use the West Saanich Road if it's Patricia Bay you want.

You'll get to your destination much faster and you won't end with a frustration hang-up.

More Research Could Triple Forest Revenue, Says Council

OTTAWA (CP) — The $3-billion annual addition to the economy from forest resources could be tripled with better federal-provincial co-operation, more research and vigorous marketing, says a study published today by the Science Council of Canada.

The background study says research on forest resources and how to use them "often appears to be too little and too late."

Many of the reasons for this neglect are political."

The report was written by J. Harry G. Smith of the forestry department of the University of British Columbia, and Gilles Lessard of the federal forestry department.

It says Canadians have invested relatively little of their forestry wealth in improved land management and research.

Correction must be made in the imperfect division of powers between the federal and provincial governments.

CONFLICT OVER USE

"Conflicts have developed among resource users that could have been greatly reduced by research into the political, legal, social and technical aspects of forest land management," the study says.

"Greater use of Canada's forests and wildlands is possible through the co-operation and co-ordination of user groups. Expanding future needs may be met the same way."

Changes were needed in federal laws governing forestry, and the provinces, except British Columbia and Ontario, "have not contributed appreciably to forest resources research."

University research had been poorly financed.

The study says federal government leadership is needed to improve the research activity.

It says Norway, Sweden and Finland harvest about as much wood from their 7.125 million acres of forest as Canada does from four times as much productive forest land.

CO-ORDINATION SOUGHT

Much more research was needed in harvesting and packaging methods.

All forest uses, including wood-cutting, agriculture, recreation, watershed management, wildlife and wildland grazing, should be co-ordinated within single provincial and federal agencies.

Such problems as wildlife, recreation and urban forestry were not getting needed attention.

The report says the federal government is not giving enough money to British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec for forest research.

Universities should also get more funds.

In most cases, research should be aimed at solving practical problems.

In future, more funds should go to research on wood anatomy and genetics, to define qualities of existing trees and enhance abilities to breed new strains.

LSD SERVED FOR LUNCH

HUNTINGTON STATION, N.Y. (AP) — Police said two Long Island men who were arraigned on drug charges allegedly mixed LSD with a chocolate powder and sold it to high school students to drink in their milk during lunch breaks.

Police said they seized 50,000 doses of LSD. The men, Nicholas F. Camerano Jr., 23, and Raymond A. Castoro, 22, were ordered held without bail. Two other men were arrested on drug possession charges.

DESIGN AND CONSTRUCTION OF PERSONAL CARE HOMES

CALL FOR PROPOSALS

PROPOSALS
The Government of British Columbia invites proposals for:
(i) design and working drawings or
(ii) design, working drawings and construction for one, two, three, or four Personal Care homes of approximately 150 beds each, to be located at Victoria (1), Vancouver (2) and Kamloops (1). These four projects will be the first of a number of Personal Care Homes to be constructed in centres across the Province.
The design should meet the requirements of elderly persons needing a measure of personal care and nursing supervision. The design should generally follow a written functional program provided by the British Columbia Government.
Lands and necessary services to the site boundary will be provided by the British Columbia Government.

VARIETY OF TERMS
Proponents must be prepared to enter into an agreement to provide appropriate services in connection with a design and set of working drawings and to accept responsibility for cost limits.
If construction is also proposed, the submission must indicate a firm price at which construction would be undertaken and give firm dates for completion of construction. In the event a proposal for design, working drawings, and construction were accepted, it is anticipated two agreements would be entered into, one contract in respect of design and working drawings, and another contract for the construction phase.
Any or all proposals may not necessarily be accepted.
Deposits are not required at the time of submission but upon acceptance of a proposal, the customary practices as to deposits and bonds will prevail.
Proposals will be examined by, and final selection if any will be with, the Government of British Columbia.

HOME-LIKE ATMOSPHERE
Proposals will be judged by how best the needs for suitability for care and a homelike atmosphere are balanced against the requirements for economy of operation and capital cost control. Other matters to consider will be construction quality and starting and completion schedules.
Sealed proposals in duplicate clearly marked "Proposal for Personal Care Homes" will be received until 2:00 p.m. on Monday, July 5, 1971, at the office of:
Dr. A. A. Larsen,
Health Branch, Department of Health Services & Hospital Insurance, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C.
Packages containing information as to site location, conditions, function programme and general instructions may be obtained from Dr. Larsen (see address above).

Residents' Influence Urged On Finnerty Sewage Result

Members of the Gordon Head and District Ratepayers Association were urged Wednesday night to use their influence now in a pending decision on expanding the Finnerty Cove sewage outfall.

Ald. Alan Newberry, speaking to the association's annual meeting, said the Capital Regional District is in "complete and supreme control" and subject only to the B.C. Pollution Control Board.

(A regional district spokesman said today that if Saanich council wants a treatment plant, it can apply for one to the Pollution Control Board and the capital Regional District.)

The district was proceeding, with independent consultants, in an oceanographic study to see whether or not a treatment plant is called for).

The decision to extend the outfall or build a treatment plant will be made in six to eight months, Newberry said, "and it's up to you to influence the decision."

The Finnerty Cove outfall was built in 1961 by Saanich. The 24-inch diameter pipe discharges chlorinated sewage 1,300 feet out to sea at a depth of 44 feet. The 1966 sanitary sewerage study of Greater Victoria said this outfall has "no problem."

Expansion of sewers in the Gordon Head area will lead to an increase in the discharge and studies of this are to be made by the regional district.

Newberry urged association members to become informed of local government issues, know council members and senior municipal staff, get the agenda for every meeting and "be watchdog for projects you feel will touch you."

He also said the association should establish clear goals, not become a "no" organization and not fight on a partisan basis.

The following officers were elected at the meeting: Lorne Ross, president; R. A. Mercer, vice-president; Mrs. Dorothy Smith, recording secretary; Mrs. Eleanor Brown, corresponding secretary; Barrie Goult, treasurer.

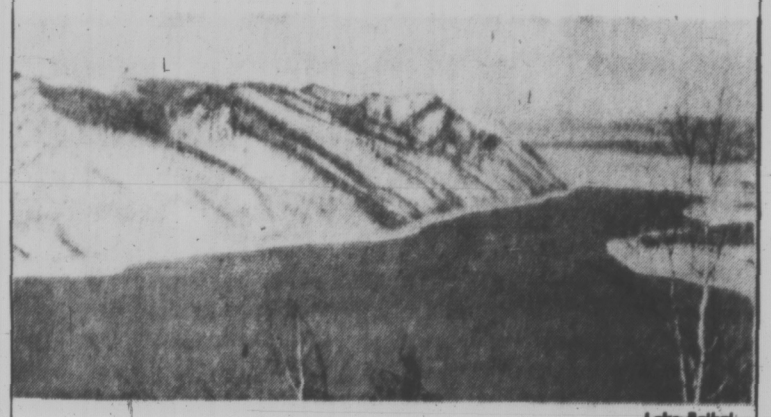
Lake Erie Is Dead — Lake Baikal Lives

RUSSIA SHOWS US HOW



Lake Baikal

While Lake Erie strangled on the sewage and industrial poisons of its 13 million people, Russia's immense Lake Baikal was saved from pollution. Now the earth's most ancient lake is living testimony to how a mass movement of the people really can halt the high priests of progress-through-production. Why did the Russians succeed where the North Americans failed? Franklin Russell traces the tragedy of Lake Erie while Farley Mowat, in an excerpt from his book, Sibir, tells how the Russians rescued their treasured Lake Baikal.

THE FOSTER PLAN

A Joy of Living With 25 Children

(This is the second of two reports on Victoria's foster homes.)

★ ★ ★

To look at Lillian Herriott you'd never guess that she had raised 25 children or that she's likely to raise that many more. A tall, poised woman with a beautiful figure and sparkling cobalt eyes, she radiates a vitality and zest seldom associated with women embedded in enormous, growing families.

Unique though she may be, Lillian is typical in many ways of the more than 300 women from Sidney to Sooke who find deep satisfaction in being a foster parent, that least-known labor of love. Now, in a time of crisis, when the Family and Children's Service urgently needs more such homes, Lillian and her gallant kind may be the most compelling recruiters.

"If only we could get across the story of the rewards, rather than the headaches, for foster parents," says Mrs. B. Levitz Packford, supervisor of the agency, "then our troubles would be over."

That story began in the Herriott household some 16 years ago when the family began opening their home and their hearts to youngsters in trouble. The 20 boys who have shared it since then with the Herriotts' own five children is not a record number. Some foster parents in the Victoria area have had as many as a hundred children over the years. But one or a hundred, most agree on three things: it's a major soul-searching decision to take that first child, it's a demanding, often aggravating role that requires endless patience and understanding and, more often than not, the dividend is measured in an intangible sense of accomplishment and joy.

One way or the other these are all disturbed, troubled children. Some may be the innocent victims of broken homes desperately needing the stability of a close family life. Some have gone out from such shattered homes to end up inevitably in the courts, then to become wards of the Family and Children's Service.

The first youngster taken into the Herriott home was such a boy. "He'd been through everything, including prison," Lillian recalls. "Twice during the seven years he was with us he was back in the courts. He was a menace to society, but to us he was a son. You stick by your own. Very often that's the whole answer."

The answer in that particular case happens to have been one of the more spectacular successes in the agency's files. That troubled boy is 30 now, the chief electronics engineer in a California company.

★ ★ ★

"There are no hard and fast rules," Lillian Herriott reflects, looking back over those 16 years, "and no way of knowing whether it will be a success or a failure. They're youngsters who have been deprived. Just the fact that they're away from their natural parents means that they come to you with insecure feelings. Yet the surprising thing is how quickly it may develop into a normal, natural relationship! A great many foster parents will tell you that they get more from the experience than the child itself. We think of it that way, too, at our house. When people ask us what we've got from it I can sum it up in one word: pleasure."

One foster parent has listed the adult's requirements as "flexibility, understanding, patience and tolerance." Very often, as another has described a foster child, he may be "a Bonnie and Clyde all rolled up in one five-foot-four package, bringing every problem imaginable."

The substitute parents who have had years of experience know that they cannot expect immediate gratitude or immediate results. But when it comes it may be the sort of overwhelming experience enjoyed by the couple whose eight-year-old foster son was assessed by his teacher in these words: "He is like a child who has been asleep for eight years and has just wakened up and tried to catch up to the rest of the world."

The shortage of suitable, volunteer homes is caused partly by the increase in the number of working wives and by the increasing mobility of the average family, but Lillian Herriott, currently the foster mother of three teen-aged boys, is the first to agree that not everyone, however generous they may be, can qualify.

★ ★ ★

"The first requirement is to feel deeply that it's something you want to do," she explains, "but even that isn't enough if you haven't the time to give it your whole interest and attention. There must be an acceptance, too, that the chances are good that the child will leave you.

"We've had boys who stayed with us up to six or seven years, until they went out into the world on their own, but others have gone back to their natural parents, which is what we all aim at. Just the same it can be heart-breaking when they go. You have to accept that, like your own children, there'll come a time when they will be leaving. The compensation is that you never really lose them once they've become a part of your family. Often you'll have their love and respect and that of the natural parents, as well, when they're able to take the child back."

The other absolute essential is that the foster parents must share the job. Time after time in the case histories in Mrs. Packford's office you'll see the phrase: "Needs a father to be interested in him." Says Mr. Packford: "We know that if we have a teen-aged boy in care the chances are that what he needs most of all is a father figure. Both parents are equally important in finding the right foster homes."

And what about the jealousies or resentments of the natural children of foster parents who must share their affection and attention with foster children?

"Again, it's a problem that seldom becomes serious," says Mr. Herriott. "There are always a number of visits by the foster child to the family who may take him and it becomes a mutual decision. We've always asked our own children for their opinion before we've made up our minds. But, like most foster parents, we think it's benefitted our own youngsters. It's broadened their views, made them more tolerant, more helpful, more thoughtful, more aware that other children are less fortunate."

Lakeside Logging Road Unauthorized

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A B.C. Forest Service official said today he never received plans for construction of a logging road on the north side of Nitinat Lake on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

★ ★ ★

John Bruce, chief forester of planning, was replying to complaints the government allowed B.C. Forest Products to construct a road along the edge of the lake, thus despoiling the waterfront.

Under new government policy, logging companies must submit their proposed road plans and layouts for study and approval.

"I don't know what went wrong," he said. "We are just as concerned about this matter."

The section of road is about four miles long and skirts the north side of the lake. Gravel and soil have been pushed down the sloping shore making it too steep to climb or to run a small boat ashore. Some small beaches have been spoiled.

A company official admitted:

"We are not pleased with it. Even the president raised Cain about it."

The practice of allowing logging roads to skirt the shores of lakes and rivers has been severely criticized by outdoorsmen.

★ ★ ★

Little or no room is left to replant trees and to establish picnic and camping sites.

Nitinat Lake is a particularly sensitive area at this time because many people would like a large part of it preserved in its natural state.

Bruce said he sent a forester to examine the road and he was not too pleased with what he saw.

"Apparently the company wanted to cut a road through to a small bay to establish a picnic site," he said. "It is now constructing the road away from the lake shore."

"But let me assure you we are aware of the damage done to rivers and lakes by logging roads," he said. "We are pressing the industry to preserve greenbelts and to construct their roads away from the lake shore."

He noted under a new government policy effective May 1, a 660-foot reserve has been placed on land around lakes and islands in lakes.

This doesn't mean that logging companies can't log to the waterfront, but it does permit government departments to make a land resource study to determine its best use, such as recreation, commercial and leasing, he explained.

★ ★ ★

"Apart from that all company logging plans are studied before actual operations start," he said, "This gives us better control over land use."

Gerry Burch, chief forester for B.C. Forest Products, said his company is committed to preserving greenbelts around lakes and rivers.

"We were the first company to announce such a policy," he said.

He said the Nitinat Road from the start ran into engineering difficulties due to large rocky outcrops and other factors.

He said the road is now being constructed away from the lake shore.

"We will leave a greenbelt," he said. "You won't be able to see the road from the lake."

Zoning Move 'Ridiculous'

A series of zoning decisions by Victoria council were termed "ridiculous" by planning chairman Ald. Harold Olafson in an angry outburst following Thursday's meeting.

While calling a public hearing as a step towards achieving rezoning for a 28-storey high-rise in James Bay, council refused to rezone a smaller plot across the street where a bank was proposed.

Council also refused to rezone to garden apartment use a plot on Market Street after a nearby property owner said he thought his own land should have been included in the proposed development. The developer said later he stood a good chance of losing the whole development. He did not buy the extra land because the price was too high, he said.

Olafson's repeated attempts to convince council members they were taking the wrong course failed.

He accused them of accommodating "the big developer and turning down the small guy."

He said following the meeting he did not know whether he would oppose rezoning for the high-rise development at the public hearing June 10, even though he has favored it this far.

He also criticized developer John Mace, who spoke against a rezoning application for a bank across the street.

Olafson said he "just can't accept" one developer opposing another's attempts to build across the street. Asked by Olafson of his high-rise and mall shopping centre at Menzies and Simcoe was to include a bank, Mace said it did.

"You are assuming that you are going to get your zoning on the 10th of June," Olafson said.

Council turned down an application by a developer to rezone five lots on Market Street. The developer, representing Krieger, Stricker and Co. Ltd., said following the meeting that he did not buy two further lots because the owners wanted $45,000 each, while the others were obtained for between $32,000 and $34,000.

Ald. Clyde Savage and Robert Baird said they thought all the lots should be rezoned, but Olafson said any further rezoning should be applied for in the normal way. To refuse the rezoning might mean the developer would lose the whole business transaction, he said.

"HE SHOOTS — HE POURS!" might have been the cry of anguish heard on the Woodward's parking lot Thursday night as two area fire departments tangled in what could be called Soggy Ball, part of Victorian Days celebrations. Six-man teams from Saanich and the Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt departments used jets from their hoses to try and drive monster beach ball into opposition's goal. A wet time was had by all, including some spectators. The CFB boys edged Saanich but it's worth noting the referee and organizer, assistant chief Vern Edwards, is from their department.

Gonorrhea Jump Not Felt Here

The venereal disease clinic operated by the Greater Victoria health board has not encountered the jump in gonorrhea cases reported by a health officer in Nanaimo Thursday.

Dr. Peter Reynolds, medical director of the Central Vancouver Island health unit based in Nanaimo, reported the 93 gonorrhea cases were up 43 per cent in the first five months of this year compared with the same period a year ago.

He said the health unit appears to be faced with an epidemic.

In Victoria, Dr. Stanley Argue, in charge of the metro VD clinic, said he didn't have the figures immediately available but he thought the local incidence of gonorrhea much the same as it had been recently.

CLINIC BUSIER

Statistics released earlier this year showed the clinic was a good deal busier last year than in 1969 and there was a substantial increase in confirmed cases of syphilis and gonorrhea.

In 1970 the clinic conducted 1,270 consultations and confirmed 260 cases. In 1969 the comparable figures were 382 and 148.

Asked about a new type of gonorrhea which has been reported in California, Dr. Argue said there is no problem with it in Victoria.

The new strain is stubbornly resistant to conventional treatment and has aggravated an already "rampant epidemic" of venereal disease in California, public health officers there have reported.

Argue said he believes the new type was brought back by servicemen from Vietnam.

Sidney to Vote On Alderman

Polls will be open between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. Saturday at Sidney municipal hall in the by-election to fill the aldermanic vacancy created by the resignation of Hubert Perry.

Voters will choose between Chris Andersen, Bernard Ethier, Dudley Johnson, Alfred Knudsen, John Pedlow or Ewed Robinson. Successful candidate will complete the remaining 19 months of Perry's term.

Harassed Non-Status Indians Establish Victoria Local

By ROBIN BURGESS

An organization designed to help non-status Indians trapped between two cultures because of circumstances of birth or marriage is establishing a local in Victoria.

Bob Stevenson, one of six field workers for the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians (ANSI), is in Victoria this week contacting local non-status Indians, discussing some of their problems with them, and helping to organize an association chapter here.

Stevenson is familiar with problems facing non-status Indians. He is a Metis, the son of a white father and Indian mother.

●

Children of mixed Indian-white parentage. Indian women who marry white men, or Indian people who voluntarily leave the reserves to try to make it in the white world are trapped at the bottom — shorn of rights as Indians yet subject to the prejudice of white society, said Stevenson.

"We're the people who have no rights."

"Indians have a hell of a fight with the Indian Affairs department but at least they have a place to turn."

Status Indians are provided with free education on and off reserve housing and medical service.

Non-status Indians have none of these rights.

●

They do have the same rights as white people in white society, but because of lack of education, in many cases, and unfamiliarity with white culture, they haven't had the same opportunities, he said.

Of an estimated 60,000 non-status Indians in B.C., 90 per cent are on welfare; compared to 38 per cent of registered Indians in B.C.

Also, non-status Indians make up 70 per cent of the inmates in B.C.'s prisons.

ANSI, operated solely by non-status Indians, is trying to do something about this situation.

The organization, which has been struggling along for about two years, received a $40,000 boost in the arm from the secretary of state department in January.

Six full-time field workers have helped establish 54 locals throughout B.C. with a total membership of about 20,000.

"We're not going to sit back and wait for people to fall into government patterns. We'll make our own patterns."

One of the main purposes of the association is to give non-status Indians a sense of identity.

Many non-status Indians, said Stevenson, pass as white and do everything they can to conceal their Indian ancestry.

●

"We want to give them a reason to identify as one of us."

Instead of looking on their mixed blood as a handicap the association is trying to show non-status Indians that they have the advantage of a unique insight into both cultures.

Campbell McDonald, a Victoria non-status Indian is proud of his Indian blood.

Of those who aren't he says, "I just think they're being unfair to themselves and their ancestors."

"When I'm driving taxi and someone gets in who's a little dark I'll ask him, 'Are you a non-status Indian'?"

There will be an organizational meeting of the Victoria local of the B.C. Association for Non-Status Indians, Sunday, at 1 p.m. at 496 Strange St. For further information phone Campbell McDonald at 479-6166.

Ethnic Program at Square

Songs, music and dances from far-off countries will change Centennial Square into a miniature United Nations Saturday when the city's ethnic groups present a varied program from 2 to 4 p.m.

Beginning with songs by a Polish choir, as well as national dances, there will be a Philippine dove dance, a German children's choir, Hungarian dances, a musical group of sitar, thubla and banjo; a German harmony choir, a Norwegian instrumentalist solo, a Philippine pole dance, an East Indian song, a Norwegian peewee dance, a Philippine bench dance, an Italian instrumentalist solo, an East Indian dance and the final number, a song sung to the accompaniment of a sitar.

OCCASIONALLY IN MY travels through this district or that, I spot a large green or brown-painted bin in some householders' yard. Each of these containers indicates by its presence that a group of neighbors is taking direct action against a problem of our times.

This is the atrocious daily waste of metal and fibre, glass, bone and fat — materials that a society aware of the drain on earth's resources should be reclaiming for further use.

Those are recycling bins. What goes into them isn't garbage or junk, although it might appear so to the uninitiated. Marketed and processed, it will be returned to use.

There are now 15 such bins in Greater Victoria locations, with more to come. For that fact, credit some other neighbors in the Gonzales Bay area who decided a few months ago to do something about waste.

They had an idea, planted and vigorously fostered by Mrs. Barbara G. Corry, a lab assistant in University of Victoria biology department.

Much that is disposed of as garbage could be recycled. So why not large boxes in which people willing to do a little sorting and ferrying could deposit reclaimable materials?

Gonzales Bay Recycling Group set to work on a sparetime, unpaid project which continues to go very well.

Its bins are wooden packing cases donated by several Victoria firms which receive their outsized wares in these solidly-planked boxes. Volunteer truckers drop them off to be recycled — a job usually done in some member's home drive.

"Compartments are installed. One is for paper products, one for bottles and tins. Into the third, which is fitted with lidded five-gallon cans, go fat and bones.

A hinged top and a paint job, and the bin is ready for delivery to a resident willing to give it yard-room. It then becomes a neighborhood depository for usable wastes.

"This isn't a garbage collection service," Mrs. Corry said. "I'd like to stress that point. Householders are expected to separate their garbage, flattening cans and cartons, before dumping it in a bin."

The custodian of a bin "borrows a truck or station wagon or something" and takes his load to a temporary depot at 175 Robertson Street each Saturday morning. There the contents are rechecked — a job for which more volunteers are needed.

"Then" says Mrs. Corry, "we get in touch with a friendly trucker, of whom we have several on our list, and he delivers the waste to the right market."

The Gonzales group has located buyers for its take, including the glass, which goes to a Vancouver firm for recycling. Only newsprint (one minor use for which I told you about on Thursday) still lacks a market.

Even on the not-yet-arrived day when the returns exceed expenses, the group will continue to function on a non-profit basis. Any surplus earnings will be donated to worthwhile community agencies.

"Our long-term approach is to bring about a changed attitude toward waste," Mrs. Corry told me. "We hope eventually to see the city or the regional board take over."

The regional board, she added, is undertaking a two-year survey into the recycling of solid wastes, and regards the Gonzales Bay undertaking as a pilot project.

In other areas, the idea translated into action by a few neighbors has attracted favorable attention.

Victoria City, friendly from the beginning, hopes soon to come up with a vacant downtown building for a central headquarters. Also, the group has been awarded a federal "opportunity for youth" grant. The amount has yet to be announced.

The chief need today is for more volunteers who share the conviction that 'waste not, want not' isn't a mouthful of empty words.

Anybody interested in helping is asked to call the Environment 100 office at Vic. 477-8415 for further information.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Image Changing

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is a long story, but I need advice. Tom (not his real name) was 17, and I was 15 when we started going steady. We kept getting closer and closer, so what happened just had to happen. Well, it happened one night in a room over their garage. That place became sort of our hideaway until his mother caught us in the act. She called my mother and made a big stink. They made Tom and me break up, and from then on I was watched like a hawk and treated like a criminal.

Pretty soon I started getting calls from the most popular guys at school. I soon found out they wanted only one thing. I had a tooth missing in front so I though it was kind of funny that the most popular guys in school wanted to date me. Then I found out that Tom had told them I was a pushover.

All the boys I go out with think I have to let them do whatever they want because I have a tooth missing in front. I am going to have a tooth put in on May 24th, then I'm turning over a new leaf and I'll show them they are wrong.

Please tell me, Abby, how does a girl clear her name after it's been dragged in the mud? — Missouri Girl.

DEAR GIRL: A girl clears her name the same way she messed it up. By the way she behaves. Don't expect to change your image overnight, but if you behave like a good girl consistently, the word will soon get around. (P.S. There is another valuable lesson to be learned from your experience. Boys talk!)

DEAR ABBY: I am a 32-year-old divorcee and the mother of two. I am deeply in love with a 33-year-old man. He is kind and gentle and my children love him and he seems to love them. The problem is that he is not an American citizen and has been in this country for almost two years.

He wants me to marry him in September, and I would like to marry him, but my friends have told me to be careful because he may be marrying me just to become an American citizen. He has told me that he loves me and I believe him, but I don't want to marry him if there is any doubt about his motives. Can you help me? — Loves Him.

DEAR LOVES HIM: If you love him and you believe that he loves you, don't let the doubts of your friends influence you. Your doubts are the only doubts you need consider.

DEAR ABBY: Do mixed marriages ever work? — Cal.

DEAR CAL: Yes. But they work better if bigots don't mix in.

DEAR ABBY: Mike's letter telling you he might belt his wife for using his razor to shave her legs made me smile, a little sadly. I used to use my husband's razor, too. And even though I always carefully washed and dried it, he always knew when I had used. And he hollered too, because I had my own razor.

I used to slip into my husband's robe and house slippers in the mornings, even though my own robe and slippers were within easy reach. Why? Because it made me feel close to him. As though his arms were around me.

Maybe Mike's wife is trying to tell him something? My husband is dead now, but I still remember the warmth of his robe. And the sharpness of his razor. His razor was always so much better than my own.—H.M.M.: Chicago.

Women Fight Media Image

By HELEN MELNYK

Male-chauvinists beware.

Married and working women have joined the ranks of students to form a Victoria chapter of women's liberation, the Women's Caucus. The group, started in January by some Uvic students, lists a membership of 45 during the university year which dwindles to a hard-core of 15 between terms.

The term liberation has been defined by the group to mean such things as equal pay and job opportunities as males, day-care centres for working mothers, and freedom from harassment in beer parlors.

Society does not allow a woman to fulfil herself as an individual, said Sharron Gray of the Caucus. She is defined in terms of her sexual role as wife and mother.

"Unless a woman looks like a model, she's had it as far as femininity goes," said Gray. "Then she is encouraged to use her intelligence. When I went to school, the girls who had higher intellectual and professional aims were the dowdy and homely."

Wolf-whistles and catcalls are taken as no compliment by Sharron Gray. "I don't like to be judged as a piece of meat."

A woman's place is chiefly regarded as at home according to Gray. "We have a media image of the gingham-dressed housewife sitting at home, baking pies and cookies all day."

She said that women usually do not pursue careers; they take a job as stop-gap before marriage and work to supplement the husband's income after. A working woman still bears the brunt of responsibility for children and housework.

"A mother who leaves her children to work is made to feel guilty. "It doesn't matter if the children have good care or learn new things."

"A housewife is a nobody. She has no name, status or position of her own. Taking a man's name in marriage is symbolic of a woman's giving up her identity to become the possession of her husband."

"There are two sets of rules for men and women. A man can stop and have a beer after work. A woman must rush home to make supper. Married women must wear a wedding ring, men don't. A man is forgiven a lot more."

Advertisers exploit women's insecurity, she said. Buying new and more things is presented as the means to fulfilment. A housewife is told that cooking with the right flour or using the right soap will bring her love and ultimately happiness.

Women are socialized into their roles by parents and schools from earliest childhood she said. At home girls are given much less independence than their brothers. They cannot go to as many places or stay out as late.

Sharron Gray considers the prime goal of a human being — male and female — is to pursue one's capabilities and potential to the fullest. Girls and boys should be brought up with equal freedom to choose what they want to do with their lives, she said.

"People should be regarded as individual human beings, rather than in arbitrary roles of male and female," said Pat Blakeman, another Women's Caucus member.

Mrs. Blakeman said the role-playing impairs relationships among and between males and females. Sexual competition between women engenders hostility and distrust. Men and women relate to each other on a sexual rather than friendship basis. People talk naturally with their own sex, but put on masks when dealing with the opposite sex.

"In the capitalistic system women are regarded as a reserve force. They will gaps, but don't assume positions of power."

Referring to women at universities, Blakeman said that "power sure isn't found in English literature; it's in politics and technology which are controlled by men."

Lacking direct power, women try to make their mark on the world by manipulating behind the scenes, she said.

"Men seem to fear the other 50% of the population. They patronize women like children."

The short history of the Victoria Women's Caucus has been marked by organizational difficulties. Sometimes 40 women would come to a meeting expecting to find quick solutions to their beefs. Lack of self-confidence and experience presented further difficulties.

"If it was any other group, I would have quit," said Pat Blakeman. "But women have troubles working together because they have never done it before without a man running the show."

"We are trying to get our heads together about goals and then doing them."

Women's liberation is still at the explorative stage. "When people ask me what I do want, I can't really answer them," said Sharron Gray. "Since the present cultural set-up has never been challenged before, alternatives have not been fully examined. Research into the differences of males and females other than biologically, is lacking."

Women disagreeing with the system run into opposition from all sides, concluded Gray. Change will never come about, until women stand on their own feet and do it themselves.

Teen-Age Sex Activity Not Increasing—Doctor

TORONTO (CP) — Medical people often react with impatience, discomfort, anxiety or disgust to the adolescent who comes to them with a sex problem, says Dr. Carol Ann Cowell.

"As health care professionals we have been remiss in recognizing their special needs. There is a paucity of knowledge on the years between childhood and adulthood."

Dr. Cowell told a group of nurses that adults need to change their attitudes and to look twice at scare stories about teen-age sex activities.

She was speaking at a conference on the care of the mother and her baby. On staff at two hospitals here, she describes herself as a gynaecologist with a special interest in children and adolescent girls.

Recent research has convinced her that advanced sex activity among teen-agers still is confined to about 16 per cent of the total number in spite of the fact that people mature earlier sexually with each generation, she said.

MATURE EARLIER

A century ago puberty in girls began at 16 or 17 years. Now it starts at 12.9 years, and in each generation, mother to daughter, moves back about 10 months.

"Boys used to grow until they were 23. Now they stop when they are 17. They reach peak virility earlier."

She said parents "are the biggest stumbling block when it comes to sex education in school."

"There is no area in which our own attitudes get more in the way.

"When girls come into hospital for delivery or an abortion, there is still the attitude that these adolescent girls need to be punished with this pregnancy. It can affect the health care given them."

People should get over the attitude that there is something sacred about an adolescent girl's genitalia, she said. A pelvic examination should be part of their general health examinations in school.

In answer to a question from a public health nurse, she said she thought parents would give permission for such examinations.

Margaret Neilson, a nursing consultant to the Ontario health department, gave the nurses a statistical picture of changes in childbirth patterns in Ontario from 1948 to 1968.

All but 3 per cent of 1969 births occurred in hospital. Miss Neilson said she knows of one that occurred in a helicopter near Moosonee in Northern Ontario.

Although the women's liberation movement says there were 2,000 deaths from illegal abortion in Canada last year, statistics indicate that of 90 maternal deaths in 1969, only 13 were the result of abortion, she said.

Miss Neilson urged nurses to take the initiative in talking to people about birth control, and pleaded for acceptance of regional centres to provide care for high-risk pregnancies.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

Dear Eunice Farmer,

All of a sudden I see small covered buttons and lots of loops instead of the conventional buttonholes. Do the loops have to actually be functional and also, should cording be used in the loops?—Mrs. E.M.

Dear Mrs. E.M.:

Many garments do have the loops and small round buttons, either covered with the same fabric or decorative. They can be left wide open to whatever length you wish if they march down the skirt and the same could apply to the bodice. They can be functional in this respect.

If you don't want to open all of them since they are usually placed very close together, you may make them look as if they were the only closing and then insert a centre back zipper closing.

Yes, we usually use a fine cording or string as a filler for the loops. They keep their shape much better. If you don't know how to make the loops, send 10 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper. The leaflet you need is called "Spaghetti Straps and Chinese Ball Buttons," and it is simple to follow with step-by-step instructions.

Doctors Puzzled By Bone Disease

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new and puzzling problem has arisen among kidney patients who are kept alive by artificial kidney machines. A disease that softens their bones has arisen in about 25 per cent of the people receiving such treatment.

"The bone disease has something to do with the kidney problem, but before dialysis (the process used by the artificial kidney machines) patients died before getting the disease," says Dr. Eugene Cameron.

"Now that the kidney patient population is living a reasonably adequate life on dialysis, we are trying to prevent the complications before they arise. It seems our ability to dialyse patients has got ahead of our ability to solve some of these problems."

Dr. Cameron, 31, has been doing research on the problem for the last two years at Vancouver General Hospital. His work had been supported by the Medical Research Council, but the grant was cut off this year.

Dr. Cameron says the grants are intended only to get the research started, after which other grants must be found.

However, he recenly received a $50,000 grant from the Canadian Life Insurance Association, one of two such grants awarded by the group each year, and will continue his work.

Dr. Cameron has been experimenting with massive dosages of vitamin D and feels the approach has helped his patients.

He says the problem with soft bones is that they are easily broken or deformed. In some cases, he says, patients have been crippled by the condition.

"The federal government should be supporting this type of activity research, but it hasn't kept pace," he says.

"I don't want to get into the politics of it. I'm sure there must be good reasons. Maybe it's more important to build roads."

RESIDENTS CONCERNED

Refuse Attracts Rats

School board property on the Portage Inlet where B.C. highways department dumps fill and people discard refuse is infested with rats, according to residents on the Old Island Highway.

The property situated at the foot of Four Mile Hill is being used by B.C. Hydro and the highways department because both have easements on the land.

A deep and fairly wide gully separates the property from Shoreline School.

"It's not unusual to see rates — big ones — scurrying over the property," said Mrs. C. MacFarlane, 147 Island Highway, whose home is situated across the highway facing the vacant land.

She is afraid they might start moving over onto her property.

She said sometimes she sees people dumping refuse on the property but when she starts taking down the numbers of their licence plates, they quickly gather it up and go away.

Norman Trim, principal of Shoreline School across the gully, said the school isn't yet bothered with rats.

Dick Falks, president of the Portage Inlet and Waterways Society, said the government should stop dumping fill and clean up the refuse.

"By filling in the gulley and around the property it is encroaching on water acreage," he said. "This is constantly going on along the Gorge waterway."

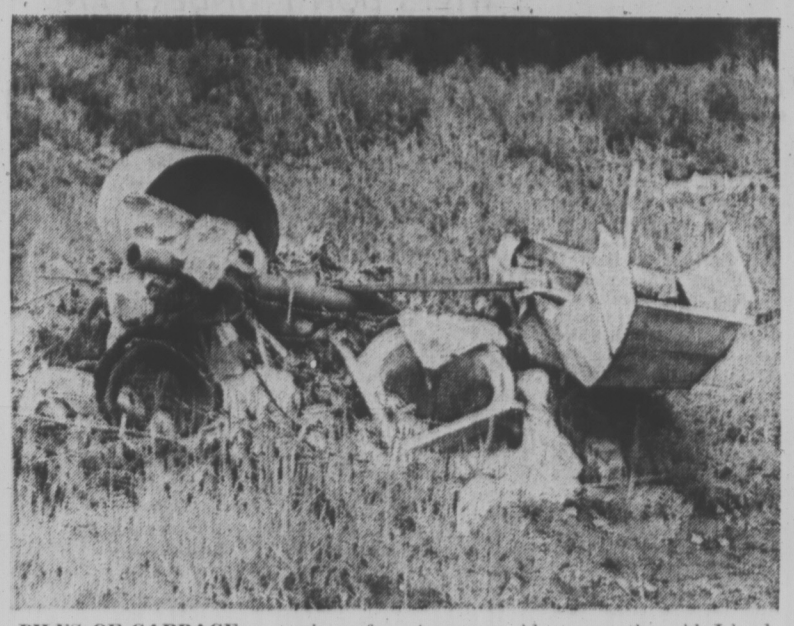
Falks said the problem in protecting and beautifying the Gorge is that there is no central body in charge of administrating and planning the inlet.

"At present Saanich, Esquimalt and Victoria border on the Gorge," he said. "It is practically hopeless to get anything done if you have to deal with three municipalities."

Falks said the whole of the inlet should be placed under the jurisdiction of a central body.

He said he was sorry for people who dump refuse and garbage in the Gorge.

"They are people who don't appreciate the esthetic values we have," he said.



PILES OF GARBAGE on a piece of school board property near the Gorge are attracting rats, according to residents on the old Island Highway.

Bottle of Wine Not for Drinking

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A young Bostonian paid $5,000 for a single bottle of red wine Wednesday — and said he would like to save it to drink on an historic occasion, "such as a week in the world when there is no war and nobody is being shot."

But his — father — his partner in a wine and spirit shop — says "we have no intention of drinking it, although the wine is in perfect shape."

The 24-ounce bottle of 1846 vintage Chateau Lafite, a Bordeaux, was purchased at Heublein's premiere auction of rare wines by Lawrence Bender, 25, who owns a Boston wine and spirit shop with his father.

The price for the rare bottle, from the personal cellars of the Barons Rothschild in France, broke the previous single bottle record of $480 paid for a 1965 vintage of the same wine.

A total of $230,751 was bid on 474 lots in the 3,500-case collection auctioned off by Heublein, Inc.

Bender and his father, Harold, who remained in Boston, said they paid $5,000 for the bottle of wine because a "prominent" customer had expressed interest in it.

"Now that I've bought it, I don't care if the customer ever pays the price," Lawrence Bender said. "I'd like to drink it myself on some historic world occasion — such as a week in the world when there is no war and nobody is being shot."

His father said that if the potential buyer doesn't take the bottle, they will keep it and possibly use it "for charitable purposes" after displaying it for a while.

While the Benders paid the highest single price, the biggest spender at the auction was Dr. Joseph Santo, 43, a retired dentist who owns Sign of the Doves restaurant in Midtown Manhattan. He paid nearly $25,000 for a wide selection of wines, including $12,100 for the 55-case president's cellar of the Carlyle Hotel in New York.

A Californian who wishes to remain anonymous paid $5,000 for a 12-bottle case of pre-1900 wines from Inglenook Winery in Napa, Calif.

Stork Flag Heralds Local Births

WATER ORTON, England (UPI) — The pending arrival of Pauleen Owen's first child is no secret to Water Orton residents — thanks to Gilbert Rhodes' stork flag.

For every time a birth for a villager is a week away, Rhodes, a 66-year-old grocer, hoists his dark blue flag emblazoned with a white stork carrying a cradled baby on the 60-foot pole next to his store.

After the baby is born, he replaces the stork with the Union Jack.

"A village needs traditions to preserve its way of life," Rhodes said.

As for 23-year-old Mrs. Owen, she was enthusiastic about the idea. "Mr. Rhodes' flag is very popular with the villagers," she said.

FAMILY SECTION

When Borders Part Families The ISS Comes to the Rescue

By MARY STOTT

LONDON — Few people know about International Social Service, even the frightened, unhappy, anxious people whom it helps. It exists to cope with inter-country casework — that is to say, to act across national boundaries to help families who get parted, girls who are deserted by their lovers or marry into an alien culture, children of mixed parentage who are not securely steeled in one country or another, people who fall ill in a foreign land, tug-of-war children.

The plea for help may have been made to a citizen's advice bureau, a children's officer or probation officer, an embassy or consulate, and the "client" can scarcely be expected to imagine the chain of inquiries, the long, patient casework, which eventually produces information and, comfortingly often, a solution.

International Social Service is "an agencies' agency" — that is why is it nearly anonymous. It links professional social workers in countries all round the world, and is based in Geneva, Switzerland, where the national directors confer from time to time. Apart from its resources in tracing people and contacting sources of aid, its tremendous value is in interpretation — that is to say that the information passed from country to country needs to be meaningful in terms of different cultural attitudes, marriage and custody laws, and family patterns.

ISS's annual report quotes an English protestant girl expecting a child by a Spanish professional man, believed to be married. "It was necessary to interpret fully to the British social worker concerned the Spanish law in this field and the spanish attitude to illegitimacy. Our spanish correspondents were eventually able to interview the man with all the care and tact necessary in this difficult situation."

More cases are referred to ISS from children's departments than any other source; more cases concern the adoption and placement of children than any other category.

Consumer Calls Flood Bureaus

Unconditional three-year grants for new staff and equipment to cope with a flood of consumer complaints and enquiries are likely to be given Victoria Better Business Bureau.

Bureau manager William Tindall, back from the first international conference of the Council of Better Business Bureaus in Miami last week, said the Victoria bureau is likely to take early advantage of special aid approved by the council.

Council delegates, representing Canada, the U.S., Hawaii and Israel, recognized the servere strain put on Better Business Bureaus virtually everwhere to meet the new wave of consumerism.

In Victoria last year, the volume of complaints and enquiries about consumer products and business practices reached about 30,000, or up to 100 over-the-counter and telephone calls a day.

Telephone circuits and staff capacity in many places are unable to give a desired level of service, and realizing the value of preserving the self-policing role of business through the bureaus, the council agreed to pay out of international funds 100 per cent of the operating and installation costs of new equipment in individual bureaus.

In addition the council will pay for half the annual salary of new staff at any of the 147 bureaus requiring help.

The estimated cost — several million dollars — will be supplemented by international corporations from a canvass list of 50.

Regular operating funds for international bureau operations come from a 3 per cent assessment on the membership fees collected by bureaus from local businesses.

It is not intended to increase this levy, since with the three-year assistance program it is expected that local bureaus will increase their membership with the higher level of service capacity.

At the end of three years each bureau will be expected to pay the continuing costs of new staff and equipment.

Tindall said the consumer mood is most obvious in the U.S., where there is "deep concern for consumer protection laws." More than 700 bills havd been prepared for Congress.

"Congressmen are being harassed by their constituents to have new laws. It is obvious this is not just a passing fad," Tindall said.

The program would not conflict with a proposal voiced last week at the local bureau's annual meeting. It is suggested the provincial government subsidize the Victoria and Vancouver bureaus in exchange for service on consumer matters at the local level which may be referred from the provincial consumer protection branch.

Woman's Pedestal A Cage

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California supreme court has struck down a law banning lady bartenders, saying the pedestal upon which women are placed is too often revealed as a cage.

In a unanimous decision, the court ruled Thursday that the law violates the U.S. constitution's equal protection clause.

The court also said the law transgresses on the explicit ban in the state constitution against disqualifying any person because of sex from "entering or pursuing a lawful business, vocation or profession.

Women should not be excluded from bartending "for their own safety," but should be permitted to take their chances along with men when they are otherwise qualified for the job, associate justice Raymond E. Peters said in the court's opinion.

"Such tender and chivalrous concern for the well being of the female half of the adult population cannot be translated into legal restrictions on employment opportunities for women," Peters said of the 1936 law.

"The pedestal upon which women have been placed has all too often . . . been revealed as a cage."

FIGHT STIGMA

Club Valuable Therapy

VANCOUVER (CP) — There's a social club in Vancouver that is the by-product of some odd ideas.

The West Broadway Social Club is for ex-mental patients, but the odd ideas belong to the "normal" people on the outside.

"Take my landlady," says Marilyn, a club member. "I told her my friend who had been in Riverview Mental Hospital, in nearby Coquitlam, was coming to visit me and she said 'Good heavens, you'll get your throat cut.'

"Of course, the landlady doesn't know I was in there, too. If she did, she would probably throw me out."

Marilyn says ex-mental patients have problems like everyone else, but their biggest problem is being accepted as stable, functioning human beings by the rest of society.

"You know," she says, "people who haven't been in a mental hospital have some very odd ideas — they think we are all crazy or dangerous."

The club is sponsored by the Canadian Mental Health Association, but is run by the members who are aged 18 to 55.

"There is a certain stigma attached to a mental hospital, whether we want to admit it or not," says club adviser Sally Cunningham, a CMHA worker.

"People tend to become shy and withdrawn as a result of it — not violent or dangerous as many people think."

She says this combination of prejudice and shyness has a devastating effect on mental patients and on their chances for full rehabilitation.

Mrs. Cunningham says social clubs have proven to be a valuable form of therapy. Members have a 33 per cent lower readmission rate to mental hospitals than do ex-mental patients who are not members.

"It's quite rare to see an argument here," she says. "People here are more understanding and tolerant, and not so quick to criticize. They understand when somebody else has been sick."

She says social clubs are also useful in providing a transition step from hospital to job. Ex-mental patients have a high incidence of unemployment — only about 15 of the club's 110 members have jobs.

Club members would like to bring their activities more out into the open, Mrs. Cunningham says, both to encourage other ex-mental patients to join and to hasten the process of overcoming public prejudice.

Auxiliary Scholarship

Members of the Women's Auxiliary to Maritime Command Pacific made a donation to the Heart Fund and decided to award a scholarship at the final meeting of the year.

The scholarship will be awarded to a son or daughter of a serving member of the armed forces in the Victoria region. Members will also present a centennial trophy, awarded annually, to the cadet with the best record for attendance and deportment in the Admiral Raynor Navy League Cadet Corps.

Officers elected for the 1971-72 term are: Mrs. I. M. Hogg, president; Mrs. A. I. Wakeling, vice-president; Mrs. R. H. Juulson, secretary; Mrs. W. A. Romaine, treasurer.

Kiwanis Tea

The Auxiliary to Kiwanis Villa will hold a tea Wednesday from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Villa, 3035 Cook Street.

There will be home cooking and miscellaneous stalls. Cook-Maplewood or Cook-Cedar Hill buses pass the door.

WIVES DON'T UNDERSTAND

A Man's Personality Changes at the Garden Gate

Following is the second of three articles on husbands and marriage.

By GILLIAN FRANKS

NEW YORK (WNS) — How well do you really know your husband? Has he become so much a part of the fixtures and fittings of the family home that you find it almost impossible to believe that he could do anything which could take you by surprise?

Then there's something that will probably take you by surprise. According to the latest surveys, you see the man in your life only 48 hours a week at the most . . . that is the amount of time he will spare you and the family during the next seven days.

Out of the 168 hours in a week, fewer than 48 are devoted by the average man to the needs of his wife and family. The rest are spent working, traveling, sleeping and indulging in social activities, most of which remain a mystery to his wife.

Few wives, it seems, rarely take much interest in what a husband does outside the family circle. This was illustrated by a questionnaire on marriage prepared by sociologists at the University of California.

One question was: "If, when out shopping one day, you caught sight of your husband eating in a restaurant with a very attractive woman, what would you do?"

Nearly 30 per cent of the wives replied to the effect that the fact that their husband actually knew any attractive women would leave them so thunderstruck that they would be incapable of rational thought!

"If a wife thinks that," says Dr. Shirley Firman, a sociologist, and author of a recent successful book on marriage problems, "she'll believe anything!"

"Men — especially married ones — are, as a race, infinitely more secretive and devious than women give them credit for," Dr. Firman says.

"In one study I was concerned with, 240 out of 400 men interviewed claimed they had had some form of extra-marital relationship — often pretty harmless — and in less than ten per cent of the cases did the wife ever learn anything about it."

Studies carried out over the last three years in America and Europe have brought to light a number of disturbing facts about the men in our lives.

Not the least of them is that although women may do more than their share of the nagging and moaning, when it comes to cold calculated thought about divorce or separation, husbands do far more of it than wives.

Indeed, in one intensive British survey of 1,000 husbands and wives carried out last year, one in ten husbands said they had seriously considered the possibility of separation or divorce. Yet the idea had apparently occurred to only one in every 18 wives.

"I have often thought about leaving her," said one man, married for 14 years, "but I feel that if I left my wife, she would fall apart at the seams. And I'd have it on my conscience for the rest of my life.

"No, my wife doesn't know how I really feel — but then she doesn't really know very much about me."

He seems to gave a point there. The average husband, according to sociological and industrial studies, spends the equivalent of five complete days away from the family each week, and few wives seem to realize the enormity of the transformation which occurs once he gets beyond the garden gate.

AN ORGE

In one test, a group of wives was asked to fill in a questionnaire detailing their husbands' basic characteristics, interests and hobbies. Then his office colleagues were asked to answer the same questions.

The results could hardly have been further apart. One man turned out to be a veritable ogre at home, while his workmates regarded him as retiring to the point of shyness.

Another husband was obsessed by tidiness in his home, while at work no one ever remembered having seen his desk without a litter of papers.

There was even one man who was an inveterate tea-drinker at the office but drank only coffee at hone.

Psychologist Brent W. Baker, author of Modern Marriage, was one of the first people to make a complete study of what he has termed the "masculinity crisis."

BASIC NEEDS

This he says is the basic loneliness of the wage-earner in the household — and the main reason why he spends so little time in it. His problems, concerning bills and debts, are either worrisome or boring to his wife. Either way, she doesn't want to hear about them.

"My wife doesn't understand," a husband may claim," says Dr. Baker, "and where his specialized world of work and money management is concerned, he's probably right.

"Most women fulfil their basic needs and ambitions within the framework of the family and find it hard to take much interest in anything else."

"I just wish my wife would participate more in family financial decisions," one oil company executive told me. "I accept that we're equal, so I want her to share responsibility for all domestic matters — even if the house needs a new roof on it."

Another put it more simply, but was probably saying the same thing: "I wish we could talk together about things that interest me rather than always about new slipcovers for the couch, or whether she looks better in a midi or a mini."

This lack of communication, resulting, as it apparently does, in women not understanding their husbands, would appear to be one reason why men are spending an increasing amount of time out of the home.

Today, if a woman doesn't get to know her husband it's probably because her most familiar view of him is as a rapidly retreating figure shouldering a set of golf clubs.

Dr. Ralph Bodoni, of the Southern States Guild of Marriage Counselors, recently estimated that 22 per cent of American housewives under the age of 45 could complain with some justification that they were "hobby widows."

Husbands, he finds, fall into two categories: those who had their hobby before they married and have refused to give it up, and those who have taken up a hobby since marriage.

The second category, says Dr. Bodoni, is more disturbing, and the blame for this state of affairs often lies with the wife.

"If a man's married life is as it should be, then he shouldn't have a constant and insatiable desire to go out every night for a couple of beers with the boys," says Dr. Bodoni.

He maintains that if a wife makes a real effort to make herself more interesting and desirable, time spent out of the house in pursuit of the "hobby" should decrease.

If this doesn't work, Dr. Bodoni says, the best thing a woman can do is "to positively encourage her husband to pursuie his hobby. The chances are that then he won't feel quite so keen about it!"

Isn't that just like a man!

Where a husband spends his time out of 168 hours a week, here's where a man's time goes:

- 56 hours asleep
- 40 hours at work
- 9 hours travelling
- 2 hours "social contacts"
- 6 hours gardening
- 7 hours hobby or pastime
- 48 hours to spend with family

An error was inadvertently made in the table accompanying the first article of this series. Good Housekeeper, which came fourth in the list of qualities men want in a wife, polled 8 per cent, not 18 per cent. It came after Good Lover at 15 per cent and before Good Cook at 5 per cent.

Out of the 168 hours in a week, fewer than 48 are spent by the average husband to the needs of his wife and family. Where he is the rest of the time, few wives seem to know — or care! It's time she did. According to one expert, men are far more secretive and devious than women give them credit for. . . .

Students Want Teacher Back

LONDON (UPI) — Nine hundreds East End schoolchildren went on strike Thursday in protest against the dismissal of an English teacher fired because he had their poems published in a newspaper.

Swinging their schoolbags in the air and chanting, "we shall not be moved," the children, aged 11 to 15, flooded into the school playground and sat down while teachers peered at them through empty classroom windows.

The children, from the Sir John Cass Foundation and Redcoat Church of England School in Stepney, said they would boycott classes until their English master, Christopher Searle, was reinstated.

Searle, in contravention of an order from headmaster Geoffrey Barrell, sent about 100 poems written by his pupils on how they viewed life in Stepney to a newspaper which published several of them. Teachers at the school said Searle was subsequently dismissed because Barrell objected to the poems.

Physical education teacher John Roberts tried to persuade the mass of children to return to school.

He shook his fist at them. "If you don't come back immediately, I will refuse to let you do PE next year," he yelled. "I shall go on bloody strike. This is not the way to carry on."

The children shook their fists back at him, some of them giggling.

Some of the school staff washed slogans attacking the headmaster off the school walls.

The children ignored them and waved placards reading "Please sirs, we want Searle."

Leslie Savage, 14, held up a poem which she said several of the children had written as a "thank you" to Searle.

It read: "Thank you God on high above, for creating Searle for us to love. You picked him out from the rest, because you know we love him best."

Leslie, who helped organize the strike, said, "It is not right Mr. Searle should have been dismissed. He is the best teacher we have ever had at the school."

"He turned what used to be a prison into a school at last," she said.

Several of the pupils' mothers turned up to support the demonstration.

"My daughter brought the poems home and I read them," said Mrs. Florence Kirk who has a 15-year-old daughter at the school. "They were very good and there was nothing abusive about them."

Barrell was not available for comment on the situation.

Plenty of Pizzaz Planned for Oak Bay's Saturday Tea Party

Oak Bay's tweed curtain will be tweaked apart this weekend for another of the municipality's two-day annual Tea Parties.

The festivities will get under way Saturday with the traditional parade at 10 a.m.

Assembling at Windsor Park at 9 a.m., bands, bicycle riders, floats, drill teams, majorettes, cars and other entries will swing along Newport, up Oak Bay, Foul Bay, Cadboro Bay, Hamiota, Estevan and Beach to Willows Park, focal point of many of the weekend's activities.

Mayor Frances Elford will do the honors at the tea-pouring ceremony which triggers the official opening at 1 p.m. This will be preceded by a Victorian Days' treasure hunt at noon.

MAYOR ELFORD

GO, GO

From then on it's go, go, go.

The SS Beaver will sail past at 1:10 p.m. Five minutes later Dave Dunnet will lead the Oak Bay Junior High Scarlet Band in a concert.

At 2 p.m. the Roger Foley Sky Divers will perform, followed by the Victoria Radio Modellers and their aircraft at 3 p.m.

At 4 p.m. there will be the annual Mary Tod swim.

From 2 to 4:30 p.m. there will be all kinds of races for children 11 years and younger.

For entertainment there will be the Katherine Costain dancers, a dog obedience demonstration, gymnastics by YMCA members, a variety show, and archery demonstration by Victoria Bowmen and organ playing by Ernie Hacket.

The mayor will present swim awards at 4:45 p.m. and five minutes later the Sky Divers will put on another show.

From 8 to 11:30 p.m. the As Sherriff rock band will play for dancing at the park while at the high school The Big Band will provide music for the Tea and Crumpet Ball.

TEA, CRUMPETS

The Totem-Tones barbershop quartet will sing during the intermission and tea and crumpets will be served by the Oak Bay Band Parents' Association.

All day long there will be a do-it-yourself art competition, an archery booth and, of course, tea.

While parents can watch their children on the rides during the afternoon they will be able to regale themselves on the traditional baron-of-beef or barbecued chicken.

After her sail-past the Beaver will be open to the public at the Oak Bay Marina.

Sunday's calendar rivals Saturday's with its events.

Canadian armed forces' aircraft will fly past at 1 p.m. and at 1:30 p.m. Oak Bay's first annual bathtub race will get the start gun.

From 1:30 p.m. to the end of the race the Beaver will go through her paces offshore.

Also during that time a department of transport helicopter will put on a show.

Again, the sky divers will perform at 2:05 p.m. and 4:45 p.m.

FLY PAST

There will be a demonstration by the Victoria Motor Cycle Club from 2:15 to 2:45 p.m., followed immediately by the Victoria Flying Club in a fly past.

Rick Coburn, the club's instructor who will be competing in the B.C. Centennial London-Victoria race, will give an aerial display in his Harvard from 2:45 to 2:50 p.m.

The Oak Bay Board of Trade, which will co-ordinate the party, will present bathtub and school arts awards at 2:50 p.m.

There will be a display by the Victoria Aqua Ski Club from 3 to 3:45 p.m. and another by the Victoria Radio Modellers aircraft from 3:45 to 4:05.

Cruisers of the Victoria Cruising Club will sail past from 4:05 to 4:15, followed by a 10-minute demonstration by Seaspan's fire tug.

The Flying Firemen will perform from 4:30 to 4:45 p.m.

The do-it-yourself art competition will carry on all day. Again, there will be children's rides, lashings of food and tea.

The Victoria C.B. Radio Club will marshall Saturday's parade and stand by during the two days of festivities.

Reaction Sought

Sidney families are urged to return promptly the recreation survey forms distributed last week by the recreation commission.

Peter Grant, commission member who compiled the detailed questionnaire, says "We want people to react and assist us in planning recreational needs."

Forms are supposed to be returned by June 1 but so far there has been little response. More than 1,700 have been delivered as part of the provincially supported endeavor to establish recreational guidelines.

Armed with this "ammunition," as Grant describes it, the commission will then make a proposal to Sidney council.

No French Papers

PARIS (Reuter) — Frenchmen went without their daily newspapers Thursday because of a strike by newspaper printing and technical workers to back an over-all union campaign to reduce the French retirement age to 60 from 65 years.

MEDICS CONTRACT OUT NIGHT CALLS

Medical Van Roams L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A group of doctors is providing house-call service during the night, roving through the city in a mobile van to be close at hand.

They're part of a small firm known as Health Systems, which provides care for patients and sleep for their regular physicians. For a monthly fee of $100 paid by the doctor, the firm provides night, holiday and weekend coverage of the doctor's patients.

A patient calling his doctor after office hours is transferred to Health Services where a backup doctor takes the call. If telephone consultation is all that is needed, there is no charge.

However, if the backup doctor decides a house call is in order, he places a radio-telephone call to a medical van cruising the city with a physician and a driver-attendant. The van roams the city from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. so it generally can reach the patient's home within minutes.

Currently more than 100 physicians subscribe to the service. In the last year, it has handled more than 100,000 telephone consultations and about 25,000 house calls. It is staffed by 20 persons, including three full-time doctors with a pool of 150 physicians on call.

his style:

In the days when sail was king, B.C.'s weekend mariners knew a thing or two about the water. And the beer. Sure, there have been some changes — but the yachtsmen of yesteryear would still say "Aye" to Old Style. It's still their style. Slow brewed and naturally aged to wet a man-sized whistle. That's why it's British Columbia's favorite beer. Down the hatch, me hearties!

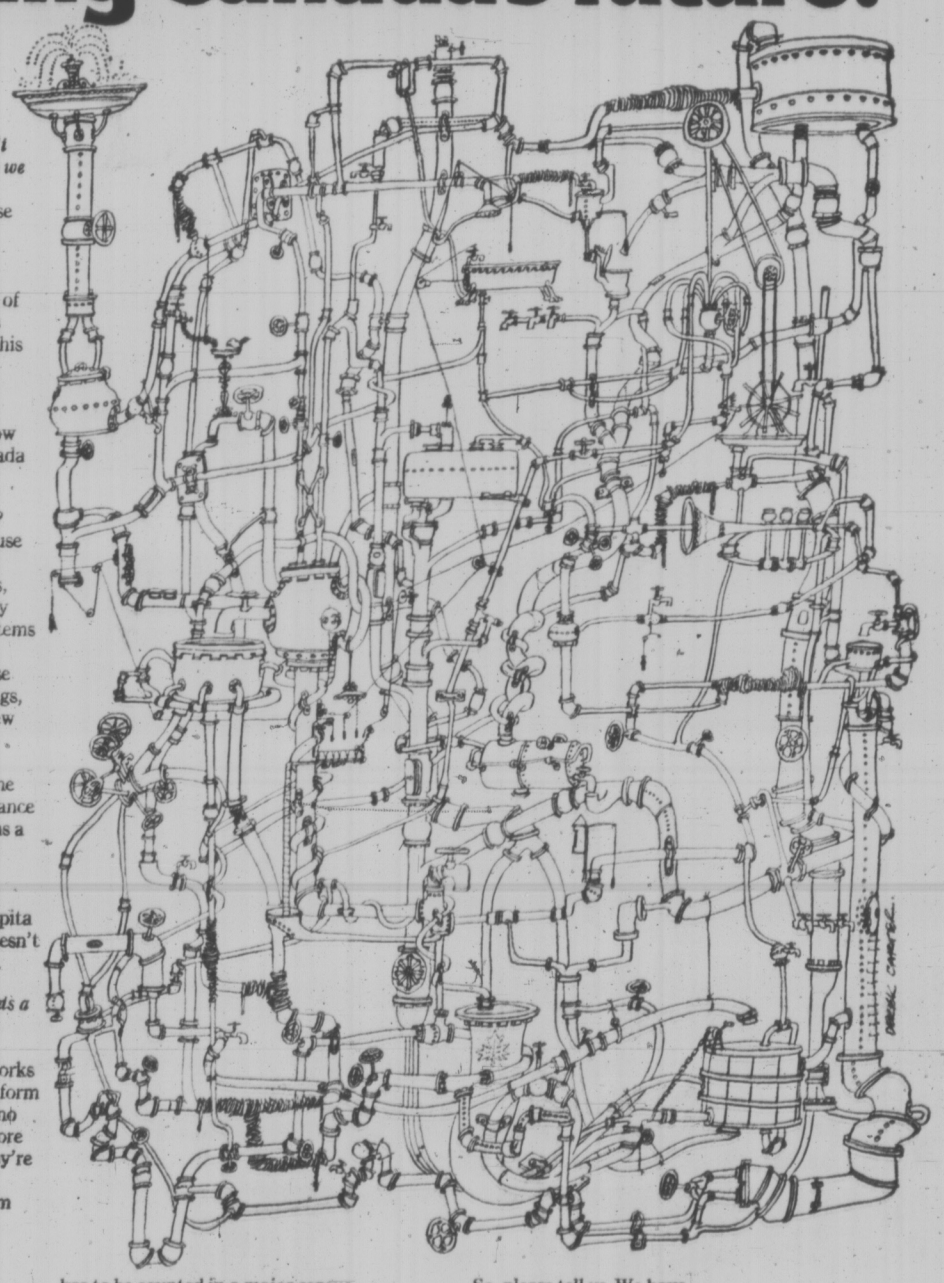
What does your plumbing have to do with planning Canada's future?



The census questions don't seem so drippy when you know how we use the answers.

What do we do with these fascinating facts you give us? We give them back in the form of statistics. And these statistics are used to plan a better future for all of us. (Even the question which asks "Is there piped running water in this dwelling?" is important).

Once all the census information has been fed into computers, you'd be amazed at how complete a picture it gives of Canada and its people.

What will this be used for?

City and town planners use these statistics to decide where to build new schools, hospitals, roads, housing developments, community centres, parks, transportation systems —practically everything.

Business and industry use them to plan for new office buildings, industrial sites, shopping areas, new products and new services.

Social agencies and governments use them to determine how much and what kind of assistance is needed to help give all Canadians a decent standard of living.

Another thing. Many government grants and assistance programs are allocated on a per capita basis. So, for every person who doesn't get counted, the community loses.

What if your neighbour gets a long census form and you only get a short one?

Don't feel offended. It works this way. Only every third census form is long. So every third household, no matter who it is, get the longer, more detailed form. It doesn't mean they're more important.

But no matter which form you get, please complete it. Your answers are important for Canada's future.

Trust us. We trust you.

Mutual trust is what a census is all about. The Statistics Act makes it law that everyone in Canada has to be counted in a major census every ten years. It also makes it law that the information you give has to be kept in complete confidence. We can't tell anyone or any other government department a single, solitary fact about you personally.

So, please tell us. We have to get our facts straight. Even the ones that may seem drippy are important.

June 1 is Census Day.
Count yourself in.

LOS ANGELES — Susan Atkins, a member of the Charles Manson family who was sentenced to die for the seven Tate-LaBianca murders, pleaded guilty Thursday to the torture-slaying of musician Gary Hinman. U.S. Superior Court Judge Raymond Choate sentenced her to life imprisonment and said: "She is a person who would be dangerous to any community. She should spend the entire term of her life in custody." Miss Atkins is 23.

VANCOUVER — A Liberal backbencher with a reputation for ruffling the feathers of the party leadership said Thursday that Paul Hellyer is headed for electoral disaster with his Action Canada movement. David Anderson, member of parliament for Esquimalt-Saanich, said in an interview Thursday night that the only realistic way for Hellyer to achieve change would have been to fight for reform within the party.

BOLZANO, Italy — A man run over and killed by a train near this north Italian town early this month was sued by the state railway company Thursday on the grounds his body on the tracks delayed other trains. Two trains were stopped for an hour after Guerrino Vapello, 29, committed suicide by throwing himself under a passing train, authorities said. Under Italian law, if the person sued is dead his relatives are considered responsible on his behalf. A court must decide damages.

VANDALIA, Ill. — When Elwood Durbin returned to his home and found thieves had taken the roof and rafters from an outbuilding, he drove to town immediately to report the theft to police. While he was reporting, the thieves returned and carted off the rest of the building, including metal siding, studs and joists. They left the concrete floor.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Entertainer Liberace, known for his flamboyant wardrobe, marched on stage at Caesar's Palace Hotel Thursday night in a leather costume of red, white and blue stripes with beads, jewels and stars. Liberace was wearing hot pants. "When I go patriotic, I go patriotic . . . I bet you never saw a middle aged hippie before," Liberace told the opening night audience.

FORKES, Wash. — Kevin Hinchen, 15, a sophomore at Forks high school, claimed a word record Thursday when he downed a quart of milk in 6.55 seconds. Hinchen, who completed the feat before the watchful eyes of three teachers and two students, said the Guiness Book of World Records lists the previous mark as nine seconds, set by Edward Turner of Wales on Feb. 24, 1970.

MAID'S FOUL SHOT BRINGS RETALIATION

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — The male directors of the French women's basketball team Thursday denied their girls did not wash, but admitted they did walk around their hotel corridors in scanty underwear.

Gilbert Gondal, delegation director, and Joe Jaunay, coach, said it was untrue their girls did not take baths as alleged by a maid in the San Raphael Hotel. The girls said they use their own towels rather than those provided by the hotel and the maids, always finding clean linen in the bathrooms, probably jumped to the conclusion they never bathed.

A local newspaper, Journal Do Trade, reported the French girls got hold of the maid who made the remarks, stripped her and gave her a good scrubbing in a bathtub.

The French national team is participating in the current sixth world's women's basketball tournament in Sao Paulo.

9 IN MEMORIAM

CRASSWELLER — In loving memory of my dear Dad, W. J. Crassweller who died May 25, 1966, formerly of Regina, Sask.
We did not know that morning,
what sorrow evening would bring
The bitter grief, the shock severe,
To part with one who was so dear,
You bade no one a last farewell,
Nor even said goodbye,
For you were gone before we knew,
And only God knows why.
—Ever remembered by his daughter Hilda, son-in-law, Will, son Herbert (of Regina), all his grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

★ ★ ★

ANDY WILLIAMS SHOW. 7 p.m., Channel 8. Dancer-singer-actor Donald O'Connor displays his multiple talents, including several skits with Andy. Thelma Houston stops by to sing Save the Country and Andy charms his audience with Born Free and Strangers in the Night. The Osmond Brothers are also featured.

★ ★ ★

THE INTERNS. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7 (rerun). A house party turns into a bizarre scene because someone has drugged the punch. The hostess dies and Dr. Pooch Hardin becomes a prime suspect. But he also had some of the punch, and can't remember anything that took place.

★ ★ ★

HIGH CHAPARRAL. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5 (rerun). A young Apache (Michael Baselon) believes the white man and Indian can work out a peace plan and even integrate. He takes up residence at High Chaparral and becomes an apprentice blacksmith to learn the trade. But his tribal chief Grey Wolf (Robert Loggia) is hostile and tosses obstacles at the young warrior's efforts.

★ ★ ★

THE BRADY BUNCH. 7:30 p.m., Channel 4 (rerun). Mike and Carol take off for the theatre, having received tickets on short notice. But housekeeper Alice (Ann B. Davis) already has plans for the evening, thinking she would be off. So that leaves Greg (Barry Williams) and Marcia (Maureen McCormick) in charge of the gang, and what happens shouldn't happen in a zoo. The kids just about turn the house upside down.

THE NAME OF THE GAME. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5 (rerun). (Part 1.) Sammy Davis Jr. is a neurotic superstar whose personality is difficult to penetrate, as magazine writer Jeff Dillon (Tony Franciosa) soon discovers. Action takes place in Las Vegas, a natural for guests like Joey Bishop, Ray Charles, Xavier Cugat, Dionne Warwick and Tony Martin.

★ ★ ★

THE PARTRIDGE FAMILY. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4 (rerun). Everybody wants to be a comedian, especially Danny Partridge (Danny Bonaduce). He tosses out a few ad libs during a performance, and gets some laughs. So now he wants to be a comic. He hires Ziggy Shnurr (Morey Amsterdam) to write some gags and they're awful. Jackie Coogan also guests as a booking agent.

★ ★ ★

ODD COUPLE. 9:30 p.m., Channel 4 (rerun). What better way to spend a romantic evening than to learn how a couple met, especially if it's this odd couple. A news telecast reminds Felix that he and Oscar met while doing jury duty, and, much to Oscar's dismay — even anger — Felix insists upon breaking the romantic mood of their double date by recalling their initial meeting, locked up with a bitter, hassling jury.

★ ★ ★

LOVE, AMERICAN STYLE. 10 p.m., Channel 4 (rerun). "Love and the Duel" stars Tina Louise as a movie star, George Lindsey (of Mayberry RFD) as her press agent, and Cesar Romero as a Latin lover who challenges Lindsey to a duel when the press agent tries to protect his client. James Brolin plays a bragging lover boy who tells Henry Gibson about notes he gets from secret admirers in "Love and the Note." In "Love and the Young Marrieds," John McMartin plays a minister who discusses plans with a young, unmarried couple of their intentions to live together.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30, Channel 12: Weekend With Father (1951 comedy). Van Heflin, Patricia Neal. A well-acted comedy about a widower and a widow who combine their families when they decide to marry and watch the reactions of their offsprings.

7:30, Channel 13: Men of San Quentin (1942 drama). J. Anthony Hughes, Eleanor Stewart. The filming was done on location.

8:00, Channel 8: The Pink Jungle (1968 adventure). James Garner, Eva Renzi. A photographer and his model are stranded in a South American village while working on an advertising campaign.

8:30, Channels 7 and 12: Life With Father (1947 comedy-drama). William Powell, Irene Dunne. The movie is a portrait of the middle-class Day family in New York City.

11:00, Channel 13: Gambling Daughters (1941 drama). Cecilia Parker, Roger Pryor. Two girls who attend a fashionable girls' school get involved in a gambling ring.

11:05, Channel 12: Middle of the Night (1959 drama). Kim Novak, Fredric March. Film adaptation of Paddy Chayefsky's story of an aging widower who falls in love with his young secretary.

11:30, Channel 7: Creature from the Black Lagoon (1954 thriller). Richard Carlson, Julie Adams. Originally produced in 3-D, this better-than-average science-fi tale has more than its share of visual gimmicks.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Every year, a physician sees many persons who complain of a difficulty with vision or a discomfort in the eyes which they say no eye specialist has been able to relieve. The person may say that he has been getting one new pair of glasses after another, but none of them has helped.

Often, when I ask him a few questions, I find that the trouble is not so much in the person's eyes as up in a tired or disordered brain, and the patient is in some sort of a fatigue state or nervous breakdown. His trouble is that he cannot concentrate well enough to read along comfortably; or he cannot, for long, take in what he reads. He finds himself going back over the same paragraph again and again, getting little out of it, or forgetting what he did get. Or the lines may seem to run together and get fuzzy; perhaps the muscles that help his eyes to focus quickly tire, and he will say that he cannot focus well.

I am even more sure that the trouble is in the man's brain when he tells me that if someone tries to spare his eyes by reading to him, he still cannot take in and remember the material, and he soon has to ask the reader to stop. Interestingly, blind persons, when very tired, have similar distresses in their eyes when reading Braille with their fingers. Certainly in these cases, the difficulty must be in the brain.

Whenever I hear this type of story, I warn the patient not to go on as he is, without stopping for a rest. Many a physician has said to me, "You know, that failure of my eyes to work well was one of the first symptoms that should have told me that my brain was getting very tired. Sometimes after a few days of rest, I would be able to read again, but soon my brain would tire and I would be back where I was before."

Shawnigan Flower Show Important

By HILDA BEASTALL

A trip over the Malahat to see the Shawnigan Lake flower show in early June has become an event of annual importance to gardeners of Victoria. This year the show is on Thursday, June 3, with doors open from 2:30 to 4:30, and again from 7 to 9 p.m.

Hilda

A community flower show, combined with a display of local arts and crafts is likely to yield unexpected treasures in the way of the unusual.

One of the horticultural classes indeed calls for a "rare or unusual plant — bloom or foliage." What this may bring to the show tables is anyone's guess, and the judges' task of deciding which plant is the most rare or most unusual is not one to be taken lightly.

With British Columbia's Centennial in mind, a number of decorative arrangement classes have been planned to embody ideas from a hundred years ago.

The Shawnigan Lake Flower Show itself is now in its 27th year, well launched on its own first 100 years. We wish the hard-working committee and exhibitors all the luck possible which amounts to congenial weather to bring out their flowers and the visiting public.

All flower shows depend, in part, on public attendance before the event can be claimed as a success.

Not only is a certain amount of financial return needed to defray expenses incurred by the organization in putting on the event, but public acclaim of one's efforts has been a part of community living for centuries.

We consider it a healthful phase of our lives to be willing to have our own efforts judged in competition with those of our neighbors, and the results seen and appraised by the public at large.

Small flower shows and larger ones, all are important in the scheme of community living. They bring humans together on the common level of beauty — the beauty of nature aided by the art of man.

As we cover more of our precious heritage of soil with blacktop and housing, the flower shows will assume more and more significance.

Support them; and keep them going.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

At a recent bridge tournament, one of the directors was selling entries for the Open Pairs Championship. At the head of the line was a gorilla with a $20 bill clutched in his paw. Although visibly disturbed, the director took the $20 bill, gave the gorilla an entry slip, and an incorrect $5 in change (the price of the entry was $10).

As the gorilla headed towards his designated table, I tapped him (I think it was a "him") on the shoulder, and trying to make conversation, stated politely:

"We don't get many gorillas playing tournament bridge."

The gorilla replied, "At $15 an entry, Bud, you're not going to get very many."

And he was right. We haven't seen either hide or hair of a gorilla since.

Which brings us to the subject of "monkeyshines" at the bridge table. Today's deal came up in a tournament. Despite his excellent result, South's bidding is not recommended.

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

SOUTH
♠ 5 3
♡ 9 6 4
◇ 8 7 5 2
♣ 7 6 4 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠ (!)	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠ (!)	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♡.

South's "psychic" opening bid of one spade, and his subsequent rebid of two spades is beyond human comprehension. His explanation was that he had a hunch that East-West could make a slam, and he felt that he should try to jam them up.

North's two-over-one response of two hearts was a marginal call, but, as luck would have it, the bid turned out beautifully for his side.

When play had ended, South had made two tricks, the ace and king of hearts. Thus he went down six, for a loss of 300 points. At a four spade contract, East-West would have scored 650 points (500 for a vulnerable game, 120 for the trick score, and 30 points for an overtrick). At three notrump, East-West would have scored 660 points.

It is difficult to censure East-West for not entering into the bidding, for each of them thought that South had a full opening bid. When North bid two hearts, East thought that West was "busted"; and when South rebid his spades, West thought that East didn't possess even one jack.

In retrospect, perhaps West should have doubled South's two spade bid. But if South had had a sound opening bid, the double could have turned out badly. So West decided to play it safely.

Sam stopped at the entrance to the ancient fort. "Let's look at those piles of old cannon balls," he said.

"They're both triangular pyramids with all sides the same, and the same number of balls in each."

"Okay." Charlie had already checked mentally. "If you take them both together you could pile the lot all in just one pyramid like that."

He was righ. How many cannon balls were there?

CO-EDS TURN GREEN AFTER TAKING SHOWER

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Some Framingham State College co-eds complain that they have been taking showers and coming out green.

Other Framingham residents say the same thing is happening to their sinks, bathtubs, walls and clothes.

The blonde co-eds, who said they bleached their hair, told officials two weeks ago that their hair turned green after washing in town water.

They blamed the color change on the chlorine content of the town water, but Health Inspector George Smith says the chemical wouldn't have that effect.

Public Works Commissioner Susan Galvin said: "We have hired an outside consultant to investigate."

District Regains Control of Sewage Outfall

The Capital Regional District Board moved this week to resume its jurisdiction over an extension to the Clover Point sewage outfall in the city.

The board agreed with an executive committee recommendation that a 1968 motion be rescinded and that construction of a new outfall again become a regional responsibility.

TOTAL FLOW

It was further agreed that district engineer Bill Gerry be instructed to take "whatever steps are necessary" regarding studies leading to detailed design and construction.

District executive director Dennis Young said the 1968 motion delegated to Victoria the responsibility for this work because the total flow then would have come from the city alone.

"But because of delays, it now appears feasible to use this outlet jointly for Victoria and Oak Bay and a portion of southeast Saanich so we can't delegate it to one municipality," he said.

The regional district is responsible for outfalls and trunk lines on southern Vancouver Island. Construction is almost completed on its first major project, the new Macaulay Point system, costing between $7 and $8 million and serving Esquimalt, part of Victoria and much of the sewered part of Saanich.

POLLUTION SOURCES

The 1966 sanitary sewerage study of Greater Victoria said Clover Point outfall was built in 1894 and discharges sewage into three feet of water below mean low water mark.

Oak Bay's major outfall is at McMicking Point, built in 1913 and emptying sewage into Enterprise Channel just north of Trial Island, also at three feet below mean low water mark.

Both were described in the report as main sources of pollution of shore waters with sewage "readily visible."

Victoria Ald. Harold Olafson said Clover Point is a "desperate situation and we have to impress on the province that we have to extend the outfall and if we have to build a treatment plant, we can do so later."

COSTS OF WORK

Cost of the work will be borne by the benefitting areas.

In other business, the board agreed that a referendum be held in View Royal this December on a proposal to set aside $3,200 a year to maintain Helmcken Centennial Park with the park deeded to the regional district.

The board agreed to extend the Beaver Lake concession in Elk-Beaver Lake Regional Park in Saanich for one year, ending April 30, 1972, and to extend the Wooded Wonderland lease for two years.

WAITRESSES CHOOSE SLEEP OVER JOBS

LONDON UPI) — Nine waitresses at a Soho strip club have been fired because they insisted on their beauty sleep.

Club owner Paul Raymond wanted the girls to serve drinks at an 11 a.m. reception. The girls, who do not finish work until 3 a.m., refused because it would mean they would not get their usual eight hours sleep.

Raymond told them to turn up or they would be fired. They didn't turn up and they're fired," he said.

Geraldine Dack, 25, one of the waitresses, said: "A girl does need her beauty sleep these days if she's to look sexy."

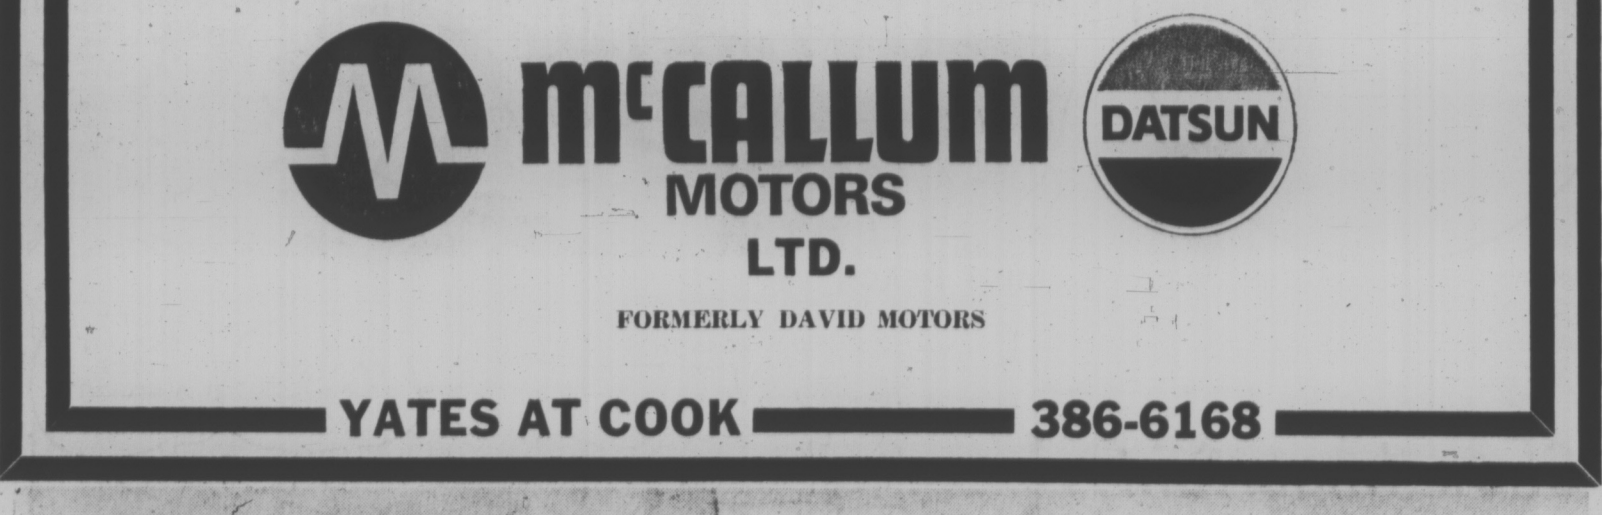
Datsun 1600 sedan is the next best thing to the Sports Car of the Year.



Datsun 240-Z was named "Sports Car of the Year" by Road Test magazine.

It's sleek, powerful, brilliantly engineered and a steal at around $4,260*.

But if you can't fit your family or your budget into a 240-Z, get the next best thing—Datsun 1600.

At around $2,235* it doesn't give you everything you get on a 240-Z. But you get the things that matter. Like a rally-proven overhead cam engine. It's more efficient than an ordinary engine, which means it's more economical.

And front disc brakes. They're the best, and no one will tell you otherwise.

And independent rear suspension. You get better roadholding, better traction, and a safer, more comfortable ride.

As a high performance sports car, Datsun 240-Z carries all these features as standard equipment.

So does Datsun 1600.

But it's the only economy car that does.

Full Economic Treaty With Russia Looms

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

LENINGRAD — A full-fledged treaty on economic development, technological and industrial co-operation between Russia and Canada may be forthcoming.

A joint communique issued after Prime Minister Trudeau had left the Soviet Union for Ottawa revealed both are running hard to reach further milestones of co-operation in record time.

And Trudeau today joined with the Russians in calling for a reduction of armed forces in Central Europe and also sided with the Soviet plan for a European security conference.

Similar to One With Finland

Leading the list of new links projected by the communique for earnest discussion in the weeks and months ahead is the Russian treaty proposal, similar to the one Moscow has with Finland.

"The Canadian side agreed to study the proposal," the communique said.

The two governments also have agreed to work together more in developing the Arctic region and declared they both "have special responsibilities and corresponding rights" of ensuring safe navigation and preservation of the ecology in the Arctic Ocean.

The communique also ranged over a number of international problems with both sides supporting a "properly prepared conference on European security" to include Canada and the United States. Both sides placed themselves on record as supporting a reduction of armed forces in central Europe.

Communique 'Plain-Spoken'

By co-incidence, the seven-page communique was hammered out in this city which Peter the Great built as Czarist Russia's "Window of the West."

An unusually plain-spoken communique by cold war standards, most of the tough details were worked out by Under-Secretary of State for external affairs A. E. Ritchie and Russia's deputy foreign minister S. P. Kosyrev. An even stronger version was sought by the Soviets but the Canadian side insisted on moderating some of the full-some language they sought.

The communique was to be tabled in the Commons this morning and announced simultaneously in Moscow, while Trudeau's armed forces jetliner was nearing the Canadian coast.

It referred to the "hearty welcome" shown Trudeau and his wife everywhere he went while logging 15,000 miles inside Russia since his arrival 11 days ago and said the atmosphere of "frankness and cordiality — in his talks with Kremlin leaders had led to the protocol they signed unexpectedly last week" to enlarge and deepen consultations," on a periodic basis at the government, commercial, scientific, cultural and tourist levels.

Safeguards Universal Peace

"They are convinced that the further development of good-enighborly relations corresponds to the national interests of the peoples of Canada and the Soviet Union and promotes the relaxation of international tension and the safeguarding of universal peace," the joint statement said.

But it also included news of further developments since the protocol signing:

● Russia's proposal for a treaty on economic, technological and industrial co-operation which would go much further than the agreement signed by industry, trade and commerce minister Pepin in Moscow four months ago providing for co-operation in exchanging industrial applications of science and technology.

● Instructions to bureaucrats have been given by both to figure out the mechanics of "further developing trade relations between the two countries" and begin re-negotiating current trade arrangements this November or December in Moscow.

● Instructions to the experts to study ways of "further expanding co-operation in the field of air transport" which sources indicated would involve improvements in the present twice-weekly Aeroflot and

READY for federal-provincial meeting in Victoria June 14 is Justice Minister John Turner who returned to Ottawa today after three days of talks in London on methods of amending the British North America Act.

House Bypassed, Says Opposition

OTTAWA — The Conservative party today presented a motion to censure the government for not bringing before Parliament the Canada-Russia protocol signed in Moscow by Prime Minister Trudeau.

The prime minister and his wife returned to Ottawa this morning from his 11-day tour and immediately went to Parliament to report on his visit.

However, debate on the censure motion was the first item of business today.

Conservative foreign affairs spokesman Heath Macquarrie attacked the prime minister as the "number one tourist of the year."

Macquarrie said there is no doubt Trudeau wants to escape national problems by travelling abroad.

The debate continued this afternoon.

Trudeau said at the airport he had not heard of criticism about the length of his stay in Russia or alleged anti-American talks.

The censure motion reads: "This House regrets the refusal of the government to bring before the House for consideration and decision the U.S.S.R.-Canada protocol in order that all aspects of the relationship can be considered before implementation."

The motion, which under House rules does not come to a vote, follows an exchange in the Commons Wednesday in which External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told Gerald W. Baldwin, the Conservative House leader, the opposition could bring the protocol before the House on one of the days on which it chooses the subject for debate, normally a government prerogative.

External Affairs Minister Sharp said the protocol will help the two countries discuss the problems in their relations.

Similar agreements existed between Canada and the United States, Japan, Mexico, France, Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Tunisia.

None of these agreements, Mr. Sharp said, was submitted to Parliament before it was made. He noted that the agreement with Japan was made in 1961 by the Conservative government of John Diefenbaker.

PRICE CONTROLS 'EMERGENCY ONLY'

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Edgar Benson indicated in the Commons today that only in a state of emergency would the federal government impose mandatory wage and price controls.

Benson was asked if emergency controls were necessary would they be distributed to the provinces and tabled in the house. Benson said if an emergency dictates their use they would not be announced in advance.

Barrett Faces Labor Challenge

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — The Waffle group's criticism of Dave Barrett's New Democratic Party leadership has taken the spotlight away from the real battle at this weekend's NDP convention — the bid for power by B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Ray Haynes.

Party sources say Haynes is certain to contest again the post of first vice-president within the party.

At the 1970 convention, Haynes lost his bid for this position to Paddy Neale, secretary of the Vancouver Labor Council.

It is not known whether Neale will run again. Haynes wants to move the NDP back to a strong pro-labor position.

Control of the party is seated in the offices of the executive and 10 members at large. And this convention will turn into a showdown between the Barrett group and those delegates who support Haynes.

A full slate of labor candidates will contest all executive positions. Voting for the executive takes place Saturday afternoon, and members at large will be elected Sunday.

About 550 delegates are attending the convention at the University of British Columbia's Totem Park. They will consider 164 policy resolutions of which almost half relate to labor, education, environment and cultural affairs.

Final policy debate will come before the entire convention Saturday and Sunday afternoon.

Caucusing for special interest groups also will be permitted. So far, Waffle and women's caucuses appear to hold the most interest.

Today's proceedings will be highlighted by Barrett's address to the convention. No advance copies of his speech have been made available to the press.

Causeway to Be Jammed For Swiftsure Eve Party

By PAT DUFOUR

The massing of the largest Swiftsure fleet in history — 191 boats — and a variety of on-shore activities will make the Inner Harbor the pivot of events this evening with a record crowd of thousands jammed along the Causeway.

Pre-race fever will burn to a pitch at 8:15 p.m. as Humphrey Golby, Mr. Swiftsure, reels off the rollcall of boats and the competitors hail back with horns, ship's bells and anything else on hand.

The band and guard of the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps will perform a Sunset Ceremony on the legislative lawns, dressed in white tropical uniforms. Their field gun crew will add a little extra fillip to the proceedings.

When the rollcall is over — about 9:15 p.m. — there will be a Victorian Days costume parade along the Causeway.

PARADE OPEN

The parade is open to everyone and will offer first and second-place prize's for the best-dressed man, woman, couple, children under 12 years of age, girls under 12, and boys under 12.

The race itself, which begins off Brotchie Ledge Saturday with the Swiftsure boats getting their start gun at 9:30 a.m. and the Juan de Fuca racers starting 15 minutes later, is expected to be one of the best recorded.

Winds will be light at the start, building up to westerlies between 10 and 15 knots as the boats head up the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The action is expected to quicken as squally conditions develop in the afternoon, working up to westerlies ranging from 25 to 30 knots.

Onshore watchers can expect a colorful finale as the boats head back to the finish line at the Breakwater Sunday. Pushed home by the westerlies, the armada will be flying a milti-colored host of spinnakers.

Heavy traffic in the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the possibility of fog patches Saturday will add a hazard of their own.

Frank Piddington of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, who is race chairman for the fourth consecutive year, warns that the competitors should be on the alert for boats.

LIQUOR PRICE HIKE LOOMS

Rumors of an impending liquor price increase by the provincial government are flying today.

Premier and finance minister W.A.C. Bennett, asked to deny the rumors, said today that it is a matter for Attorney-General Leslie Peterson who is responsible for the liquor control board.

Peterson could not immediately be reached for comment.

William Bruce, liquor control board chairman, said he has received no notification from the provincial cabinet to authorize any increases.

According to persistent reports, the increase would take effect next week, possibly with the opening of liquor stores on Tuesday June 1.

Among rumored increases are an across-the board five per cent increase, but other predictions include a decrease in the price of some products.

Pressure for an increase in alcoholic products is believed to have mounted following the imposition of a five-cent a pack tax on cigarettes and tobacco products during the last legislative session.

B.C. prices for Canadian whisky are among the lowest in Canada, if not the lowest.

Alberta revised its liquor prices, effective Tuesday, increasing the prices of some brands by five and ten cents. Increases by manufacturers are given as reasons.

CORONA FAMILY JUST CAN'T BELIEVE . . .

'Monster' Mass Slayer or Model Husband?

By GEORGE LARDNER

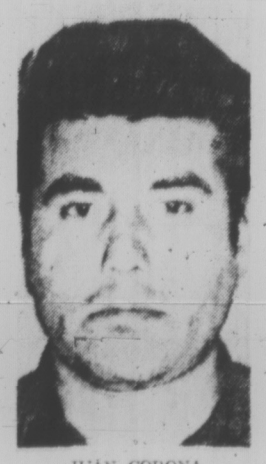
YUBA CITY, Calif. (WP) — Gloria Corona was still stunned by the predawn raid that tumbled her family out of bed and her husband into jail Wednesday morning.

Now she was alone among friends, but alone. And Juan Vallejo Corona, the man she had married 12 years ago, the father of her four young daughters, was locked up on charges of mass murder suspected of killing at least 20 men and burying them along the banks of the Feather River here.

"My little girl, Marta, woke up because they were putting flashlights in all the rooms," Mrs. Corona recalled. "The police gave Juan a warning . . . about his rights. But he was shocked. He was in his underclothes. He couldn't understand."

Deputies from the Sutter County sheriff's office, one of them armed with a carbine, began reading out some of the accusations against her husband, Mrs. Corona said. But she said, they failed to make an impression. Although Corona moved here from the Mexican town of Autlan Jalisco about 15 years ago, he is not yet fluent in English.

"He said maybe his daughter could read it all out for him," Mrs. Corona said, tears swelling up in her eyes. Fortunately, friends around her added, the officers told Corona that that would not be appropriate.



JUAN CORONA
. . . 'he doesn't understand'

A short woman with a round face and deep brown eyes, Gloria Corona spoke rapidly in Spanish, her words translated by a friend, Frank Vega, and an interpreter that two newsmen had brought along in hopes of interviewing her briefly. They found her at a farm labor camp just north of town that is run by one of her husband's seven brothers, Pedro Corona, 35. It was close to midnight Wednesday night, but Mrs. Corona wasn't sleepy. Nor had she eaten all day.

FAMILY MAN

MURDER TOLL 20

YUBA CITY, Calif. (CP) — Eight more bodies of murder victims have been dug up in fruit orchards near here, bringing to 20 the number found along the Feather River, law enforcement officers said.

The latest discoveries made this the largest multiple murder case in modern American history.

Isolated in a Yuba City jail and charged with the murders is Juan V. Corona, 37, of Yuba City, who spent three months in a state mental hospital in 1956.

There still was no apparent motive for the macabre slayings.

Russia 'Abandons' Ousted Friends

CAIRO (CP) — The Soviet Union and Egypt signed a 15-year treaty of friendship and co-operation Thursday night, renewing their close alliance in the wake of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's purge of his rivals for power.

The pact signed by Sadat and visiting President Nikolai Podgorny provides for continued Soviet military, economic, political and scientific aid. The two governments also pledged "non-interference in the internal affairs of each other," which could be interpreted as a Soviet abandonment of the leftist leaders ousted and arrested by Sadat in the recent Egyptian power struggle.

The treaty, which provides specifically for the training of Egyptian personnel to man Soviet-supplied weapons, was seen by observers in Cairo as a bond which will link Egyptian and Soviet policies for decades to come.

The Russians promised the Egyptians arms and military training to enable them to win back the Sinai desert from Israel. The treaty said arms and equipment would be supplied to Egypt "with a view to strengthening its capacity to eliminate the consequences of aggression as well as increasing its ability to stand up to aggression in general."

once-weekly Air Canada flights between Montreal and Moscow.

● Confirmation the two governments will negotiate a general agreement on cultural, educational and scientific exchanges.

(At present, up to six students and teachers from Carleton University and the University of Toronto can come here on exchanges but at this date there is only one here, intenational law Prof. on a two-month project in this city. (Significantly, he said mounting frustrations with red tape interference in his work ceased overnight after the protocol was signed last week.)

IMPORTANT

The Russian proposal for an economic treaty probably is the most important addition to the visit's results.

Trudeau was given a rough draft of specifics to take back with him for cabinet study.

It lays the basis for negotiations, if Canada agrees to go ahead with it, and is understood to contain such items as exchange of the equivalent of most-favored nation trading status, definition of economic cooperation and the possible ground rules for joint venture industrial developments involving Canadians and Russians.

Canadian sources said it might take some months of study and negotiations before Ottawa can come to a decision.

DEBATE ISSUE

While a treaty can be made and ratified by the cabinet alone, normal practice in the past has given Parliament an opportunity to debate its conditions after signing and before ratification.

Trueau spent his last two nights in Russia in a modern luxury hotel designed and built by Finnish companies recently under the Soviet-Finland economic treaty which has enabled those two neighbours to maintain balance of payments equilibrium while trading intensively.

The communique's final sentence noted that Trudeau's invitation to visit Canada at a mutually-convenient time "was gratefully accepted" by Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

'BON VOYAGE'

Kosygin phoned Trudeau from Moscow Thursday to wish him "bon voyage." Trudeau said it was "au revoir" and not "adieu."

Both men agreed their reports indicated the protocol was well received in the Canadian Press, Pravda and Soviet broadcasts have given rare prominence in coverage of the PM's tour and speeches.

Ferries Change Schedules

Black Ball's MV Coho will go onto its summer schedule Saturday, making four return trips to Port Angeles daily.

Departure times from Victoria will be 6:30 a.m., 11 a.m., 3:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

From Port Angeles 8:45 a.m., 1:15 p.m., 5:30 p.m., and 9:20 p.m.

The summer schedule will remain in effect seven days a week until Sept. 19. Rates are $2.50 for passengers and $7 for cars.

B.C. Ferries went onto a summer schedule last Saturday, with vessels making the Swartz-Bay-Tsawassen run hourly from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Ferries making the Departure Bay-Nanaimo) to Horseshoe Bay (West Vancouver) run start service at 6:15 a.m. and make a final crossing at 11 p.m. Patrons should consult ferry schedules for specific departure times through the day.

The B.C. Ferries summer schedule will be in effect until Sept. 19. Passengers can get 60 for $1 instead of $2 Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Shepanowski found a family of mice had built a nest on the carburetor.

RAIL DISASTER LEAVES 45 DEAD

WUPPERTAL (AP) — Forty-five persons, most of them school children returning from a study tour, were killed Thursday night in the worst railway accident in West German history.

Railway officials said at least 24 others were severely injured when a special two-coach diesel passenger train and a freight train collided on a single-track line between the Wuppertal suburbs of Oberbarmen and Radevormwald.

The dead, officials said, included 40 pupils in senior classes of the Radevormwalder junior high school, two teachers, an accompanying chaperon and two rail employees. The classes had been on a study tour of the north German city of Bremen.

A spokesman for the prosecutor's office said it was clear human failing was involved.

The freight train was on regularly scheduled run from Radevormwald to Wuppertal and the passenger coaches headed in the opposite direction when the accident occurred shortly after 9 p.m.

The authorities said the freight train engineer, who escaped injury, told them he had taken a sign from a stationmaster as the signal for the freight train to pull out.

The stationmaster, however, denied giving any such signal and tried in vain to signal the freight to halt, authorities said. When this failed, the stationmaster was quoted as saying, he warned all rescue stations along the line of the impending collision.

PM Starts Air Race

Times News Services

LONDON — At a signal from Prime Minister Trudeau 75 pilots will take to the sky from an English airfield July 1 in the race to Victoria.

Trudeau will be standing on the steps of the legislative buildings in Victoria and will start the race by transatlantic telephone.

The finish is expected a week later when the winning plane will fly over a radio mast in Victoria to claim a first prize of $50,000 for the 8,000-mile flight.

First off the ground in England will be Canadian Indian Rod Dixon, a 22-year-old professional pilot, with an axe and a tent in the back of his plane. The axe and tent are required by the race rules in case a pilot comes down short of his goal.

. . . SLAYER OR MODEL HUSBAND?

To his wife, he was "always a good husband, always treated me right and the children right, without violence. He's always been a good provider. He's not the kind of guy that goes out and drinks in bars. He very seldom goes out at night," she asserted.

The authorities at the Sutter County courthouse here have a different view. To them, Juan Corona is some sort of monster, the accused murderer of a mounting list of transient farm workers, all stabbed in the chest and hacked to death with a heavy blade, perhaps an axe or machete. The corpses have all been unearthed over the past week from shallow graves not far from the farm labor camp that Juan Corona operated on the Jack Sullivan Fruit Ranch some five miles north of Yuba City.

SAME BURIAL

Each of the victims was buried the same way, with his shirt pulled up over his head, investigators said.

Could her husband have done such a thing?

Mrs. Corona shook her head vehemently, hands clasped tightly in front of her as she sat at the end of a long mess hall table.

"As long as I've known him," she insisted, "he always did his best to treat his employees as he did himself. A huband that can be a good provider and a good father couldn't possibly be any other way to other people."

A husky 200-pounder, Corona hired mostly Mexican-American help, rarely Anglos, his friends and family declared. But even when he did sign up "gabacho" labor, Mrs. Corona said, "he treated them equally in my opinion."

A farm labor contractor licensed by California State authorities since 1962, Corona has had a clean record, according to officials of the state's division of labor law enforcement. He lived with his family in Live Oak, about nine miles north of town, until moving into a new home on Richland Road here about three years ago.

QUIET FAMILY

Their neighbors say they kept to themselves, "a very, very quiet family." Corona kept three rabbits in the yard as pets for his little girls, amid a tangle of swings and other play equipment.

One housewife across the street, however, recalled last evening that there was a family spat in front of the Corona home shortly after they moved in. She said it ended with Corona striking his wife.

He was picked up a few hours after sheriff's deputies identified one of the bodies as that of Sigrid E. Beierman, 63, a drifter from adjoining Marysville who had been listed by police there as missing since early May. An officer who had been asked to check then on Beierman's whereabouts had been told that the man was last seen getting into Corona's pickup van. Corona was questioned briefly then, but nothing came of it until the body was found Tuesday afternoon.

DON'T BELIVE IT

"I still can't understand. I still don't believe it," Pedro Corona said. "I will never believe my brother even had the time to do the things they accuse him of . . . my father and my mother, they teach all of us to respect everybody, love everybody."

A boyish-looking man, Pedro Corona believes in God "very hard." So does Gloria Corona, a native of Guadalajara. But she is pessimistic about what will happen to her husband.

"I still have faith in God . . . and hope," she said. "But I believe my husband will probably go to the pentitentiary because he doesn't have representation, Chicano representaton. I'm afraid he doesn't understand as much as people might think."

Smallwood Junior 'Defending Mum'

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood says his son William was defending his mother when he punched an opposition member in the face in the legislature Thursday night.

William, 42, Liberal member for Green Bay, was expelled for one week by a unanimous vote — including the premier's — after he hit William Marshall (PC— Ft. John's East).

"Violence is not good, not right . . . not proper and it shouldn't be done," the premier said in an interview today.

"My son did go across the floor of the house and punch William Marshall in the face.

"But then how does a young man sit there and listen to his mother being slandered. Is a young man supposed to sit there and take that."

DEFLECTED BLOW

Mr. Marshall, 35, received at least one blow near the ear. He warded off a second punch with his upraised arm.

The incident occurred after he mentioned the premier's wife while reading a list of persons described as slum landlords.

The premier said in the interview Mr. Marshall "didn't have to bring in my wife."

"She's not in politics, she's a very quiet, retiring woman."

William Smallwood told the house after the incident:

"If he attacks her again I will attack him again, either inside or outside the house."

The incident was sparked by an article on slum landlords to which Mr. Marshall referred during his speech.

Quoting from the first issue of the Alternate Press, a tabloid published by eight university students on a $9,600 grant from the federal Opportunities for Youth program, Mr. Marshall said an article in the publication named Mrs. Smallwood as the owner of a house in an older section of downtown St. John's.

The article said the rent is "paid monthly at the premier's office."

STARTS WITH SHOUT

"There's something I'm not going to put up with," William Smallwood shouted and strode across the floor to swing two punches at Mr. Marshall.

Harold Collins (PC—Gander), who was sitting nearby, grabbed Mr.Smallwood.

Bert Hemmens, the sergeant-at-arms, then took Mr. Smallwood by the arms and escorted him outside.

The premier appeared not to see the start of the incident.

"Hey, hey Bill," he said as his son was led away.

Speaker George Clarke later recalled William Smallwood for an explanation.

The house unanimously approved a motion by Justice Minister L. R. Curtis to banish Mr. Smallwood for a week.

The premier remained silent during the discussion.

VISITOR to British Columbia is Governor-General Roland Michener who today receives an honorary degree from the University of B.C. He is spending eight days in the province.

Centennial Mood Set At Wrenette Parade

Watched by hundreds of parent and friends, the Patricia Dufour Navy League Wrenette Corps strode through its paces at its annual inspection Thursday at Navy League headquarters on Robert.

Setting the centennial mood, inspecting officer Cmdr. E. K. Lee, commanding officer of HMCS Malahat, wore the cocked hat and frock coat uniform worn by naval officers in the old days.

Also in the inspecting party were Mrs. George Dufour, national chairman for Wrenettes; Bill George, vice-president of the Navy League's Vancouver Island division, and Bill Ross, local president.

TWO AWARDS

During the evening the corps was presented with two national Navy League awards.

One was the national Wrenette marksmanship trophy for rifle shooting and the other, the proficiency trophy for best Wrenette corps on the Island.

Also received was the runner-up trophy, won when the corps' rifle team competed in the Brigadier Adams competition, open to all cadet corps and Wrenette corps on Vancouver Island.

OW Anna Marie Micks received the women's auxiliary to the Navy League's proficiency award.

Her three sisters also earned honors. PO Sharon Micks won the most co-operative award of the ex-service women's, branch 182, Royal Canadian Legion; OW Margaret Micks received the attendance award of the ladies' auxiliary, Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada. OW Helen Micks also received an attendance award.

OTHER WINNERS

PO Shannon Akins won two awards — the Patricia Dufour Marksmanship Trophy and the Royal Canadian Legion's award for most efficient senior wrenette.

Also receiving awards were: OW Linda Murray, most improved wrenette; OW Sheila Lekivetz, most efficient junior wrenette; and OW Ramona Ratchford, most co-operative junior wrenette.

AMCHITKA HEARINGS

AEC Warned of Possible Disaster

Two representatives of a Victoria-based group protesting the proposed nuclear test blast set for October on Amchitka Island presented briefs today at a hearing in Anchorage, Alaska.

Kurt Horn, president of the Cowichan-Malahat branch of the Society for Pollution and Environment Control, and Seiichi Tanaka, a graduate student in nuclear physics at the University of Victoria and a Japanese citizen, made their presentations to the Atomic Energy Commission on behalf of Amchitka 2.

Horn's brief emphasized the danger of a disaster occurring as a result of the planned blast while Tanaka dealt with the possibilities of radiation poisoning.

EARTHQUAKES?

Horn told the hearing: "When drug companies plan to market a product, they should be required to demonstrate that it is safe for human use. Considering the relatively enormous consequences of the proposed test should even one of the several possible dangerous consequences actually occur, then that principle ought to be applied with even greater force.

"Can the AEC be certain that the proposed test will not create earthquakes, tidal waves, or releases of radioactive material into the environment? When the results can be so catastrophic and irreversible, why then should the proposed test be permitted to proceed?"

Horn went on to warn of the possibility of earthquakes and tidal waves occurring after the blast.

"The unstable seismic conditions which prevail along the Pacific rim often manifest themselves in earthquakes and tidal waves, some of them, fresh to the memory of Alaskans and Californians, of catastrophic proportions.

NOT POSSIBLE

"It is, of course, not possible to claim absolutely that quakes distant from the test site can be triggered by underground testing in the earthquake belt, nor is it possible to state absolutely that they cannot be."

Horn said his should be viewed particularly in the ligst of the unprecedented magnitude of the blast — five megatons — which the AEC plans for Amchitka. He also brought up the possibility of cumulative effects from the 1969 blast — just over one megaton — combined with the October blast.

It was noted that there is an "enormous collecion of radioactive wastes" stored at Hanford, Wash., as well as a reactor-producer in operation there, both on the same earthquake belt as Amchitka. "We could be faced with almost incalculable radiation danger by the physical disruption of this area by marked tremors."

EARTH FAULTS

Horn's brief said: "We of Amchitka 2 believe that the United States has to respect not only the territorial integrity of Canada but its environmental integrity as well. When earth fault lines, water and air currents extend over national boundaries, then it is a violation of environmental sovereignty for one government to pursue activities which can create irreparable damage to the livelihoods of people who live in another country and which can result in the loss of health and lives.

"Now that tse United States and the Soviet Union may be undertaking means to limit or reduce nuclear warhead development, let the U.S. demonstrate the seriousness of its intentions by cancelling the Amchitka test as a "first step."

Tanaka told the hearing: "As human beings the scientists must think of the effects they are having on our world and the world of our children. I want to ask you to think again whether your work will aid human beings or destroy them; and if you conclude that your study contributes to the devastation of humanity, please have the courage to stop this activity.

EXPERIMENTATION

"In the course of all scientific experimentation we know there is the risk of accident and we must accept these risks. But why must we accept these risks in developing nuclear weapons?

"These tests do not contribute to the progress or peace of humanity. In the case of nuclear weapons testing we cannot see the expression of love for mankind or any profit to human advancement. Today the use of human beings as experimental animals is frowned upon.

"Although the AEC might have considered various dangers in the Amchitka test, to the Japanese people one of the most important dangers is sea pollution because in large part we live on sealife through fisheries. Japanese consume per capita five times as much seafood as north Americans and Japanese fishermen fish in waters surrounding the Amchitka test site."

Tanaka made his presentation in Japanese with an English translation available to the hearing officers.

The two delegates will report on the hearing and response from the AEC at a public meeting at St. Andrew's Cathedral Tuesday at 8 p.m.

2 Convicted

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Andrew Quock, 47, was placed on probation for a year and Harry Buhay, 36, was jailed for three months for defrauding the rehabilitation department of welfare funds.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Soviets Jail Latvian Jews

MOSCOW (AP) — Four Latvian Jews were convicted here of "anti-Soviet slander" at the end of a closed trial in Riga. The court imposed prison sentences ranging from one year to three years.

Reporting the verdict, Tass news agency said the "criminal group" had been convicted of reprinting "anti-Soviet publications from Tel Aviv and duplicating other slanderous materials."

The stiffest term, a three-year sentence, was imposed on Arkady Shpilberg, who protested in court that he was being tried simply because he wanted to go to Israel.

THE FOSTER PLAN

A Joy of Living With 25 Children

(This is the second of two reports on Victoria's foster homes.)

★ ★ ★

To look at Lillian Herriott you'd never guess that she had raised 25 children or that she's likely to raise that many more. A tall, poised woman with a beautiful figure and sparkling cobalt eyes, she radiates a vitality and zest seldom associated with women embedded in enormous, growing families.

Unique though she may be, Lillian is typical in many ways of the more than 300 women from Sidney to Sooke who find deep satisfaction in being a foster parent, that least-known labor of love. Now, in a time of crisis, when the Family and Children's Service urgently needs more such homes, Lillian and her gallant kind may be the most compelling recruiters.

"If only we could get across the story of the rewards, rather than the headaches, for foster parents," says Mrs. B. Levitz Packford, supervisor of the agency, "then our troubles would be over."

jack scott

That story began in the Herriott household some 16 years ago when the family began opening their home and their hearts to youngsters in trouble. The 20 boys who have shared it since then with the Herriotts' own five children is not a record number. Some foster parents in the Victoria area have had as many as a hundred children over the years. But one or a hundred, most agree on three things: it's a major soul-searching decision to take that first child, it's a demanding, often aggravating role that requires endless patience and understanding and, more often than not, the dividend is measured in an intangible sense of accomplishment and joy.

One way or the other these are all disturbed, troubled children. Some may be the innocent victims of broken homes desperately needing the stability of a close family life. Some have gone out from such shattered homes to end up inevitably in the courts, then to become wards of the Family and Children's Service.

The first youngster taken into the Herriott home was such a boy. "He'd been through everything, including prison," Lillian recalls. "Twice during the seven years he was with us he was back in the courts. He was a menace to society, but to us he was a son. You stick by your own. Very often that's the whole answer."

The answer in that particular case happens to have been one of the more spectacular successes in the agency's files. That troubled boy is 30 now, the chief electronics engineer in a California company.

★ ★ ★

"There are no hard and fast rules," Lillian Herriott reflects, looking back over those 16 years, "and no way of knowing whether it will be a success or a failure. They're youngsters who have been deprived. Just the fact that they're away from their natural parents means that they come to you with insecure feelings. Yet the surprising thing is how quickly it may develop into a normal, natural relationship. A great many foster parents will tell you that they get more from the experience than the child itself. We think of it that way, too, at our house. When people ask us what we've got from it I can sum it up in one word: pleasure."

One foster parent has listed the adult's requirements as "flexibility, understanding, patience and tolerance." Very often, as another has described a foster child, he may be "a Bonnie and Clyde all rolled up in one five-foot-four package, bringing every problem imaginable."

The substitute parents who have had years of experience know that they cannot expect immediate gratitude or immediate results. But when it comes it may be the sort of overwhelming experience enjoyed by the couple whose eight-year-old foster son was assessed by his teacher in these words: "He is like a child who has been asleep for eight years and has just wakened up and tried to catch up to the rest of the world."

The shortage of suitable, volunteer homes is caused partly by the increase in the number of working wives and by the increasing mobility of the average family, but Lillian Herriott, currently the foster mother of three teen-aged boys, is the first to agree that not everyone, however generous they may be, can qualify.

★ ★ ★

"The first requirement is to feel deeply that it's something you want to do," she explains, "but even that isn't enough if you haven't the time to give it your whole interest and attention. There must be an acceptance, too, that the chances are good that the child will leave you.

"We've had boys who stayed with us up to six or seven years, until they went out into the world on their own, but others have gone back to their natural parents, which is what we all aim at. Just the same it can be heart-breaking when they go. You have to accept that, like your own children, there'll come a time when they will be leaving. The compensation is that you never really lose them once they've become a part of your family. Often you'll have their love and respect and that of the natural parents, as well, when they're able to take the child back."

The other absolute essential is that the foster parents must share the job. Time after time in the case histories in Mrs. Packford's office you'll see the phrase: "Needs a father to be interested in him." Says Mr. Packford: "We know that if we have a teen-aged boy in care the chances are that what he needs most of all is a father figure. Both parents are equally important in finding the right foster homes."

And what about the jealousies or resentments of the natural children of foster parents who must share their affection and attention with foster children?

"Again, it's a problem that seldom becomes serious," says Mr. Herriott. "There are always a number of visits by the foster child to the family who may take him and it becomes a mutual decision. We've always asked our own children for their opinion before we've made up our minds. But, like most foster parents, we think it's benefitted our own youngsters. It's broadended their views, made them more tolerant, more helpful, more thoughtful, more aware that other children are less fortunate."

Lakeside Logging Road Unauthorized

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A B.C. Forest Service official said today he never received plans for construction of a logging road on the north side of Nitinat Lake on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

★ ★ ★

John Bruce, chief forester of planning, was replying to complaints the government allowed B.C. Forest Products to construct a road along the edge of the lake, thus despoiling the waterfront.

Under new government policy, logging companies must submit their proposed road plans and layouts for study and approval.

"I don't know what went wrong," he said. "We are just as concerned about this matter."

The section of road is about four miles long and skirts the north side of the lake. Gravel and soil have been pushed down the sloping shore making it too steep to climb or to run a small boat ashore. Some small beaches have been spoiled.

A company official admitted:

"We are not pleased with it. Even the president raised Cain about it."

The practice of allowing logging roads to skirt the shores of lakes and rivers has been severely criticized by outdoorsmen.

★ ★ ★

Little or no room is left to replant trees and to establish picnic and camping sites.

Nitinat Lake is a particularly sensitive area at this time because many people would like a large part of it preserved in its natural state.

Bruce said he sent a forester to examine the road and he was not too pleased with what he saw.

"Apparently the company wanted to cut a road through to a small bay to establish a picnic site," he said. "It is now constructing the road away from the lake shore."

"But let me assure you we are aware of the damage done to rivers and lakes by logging roads," he said. "We are pressing the industry to preserve greenbelts and to construct their roads away from the lake shore."

He noted under a new government policy effective May 1, a 660-foot reserve has been placed on land around lakes and islands in lakes.

This doesn't mean that logging companies can't log to the waterfront, but it does permit government departments to make a land resource study to determine its best use, such as recreation, commercial and leasing, he explained.

★ ★ ★

"Apart from that all company logging plans are studied before actual operations start," he said. "This gives us better control over land use."

Gerry Burch, chief forester for B.C. Forest Products, said his company is committed to preserving greenbelts around lakes and rivers.

"We were the first company to announce such a policy," he said.

He said the Nitinat Road from the start ran into engineering difficulties due to large rocky outcrops and other factors.

He said the road is now being constructed away from the lake shore.

"We will leave a greenbelt," he said. "You won't be able to see the road from the lake."

Zoning Move 'Ridiculous'

A series of zoning decisions by Victoria Council were termed "ridiculous" by planning chairman Ald. Harold Olafson in an angry outburst following Thursday's meeting.

While calling a public hearing as a step towards achieving rezoning for a 28-storey high-rise in James Bay, council refused to rezone a smaller plot across the street where a bank was proposed.

Council also refused to rezone to garden apartment use a plot on Market Street after a nearby property owner said he thought his own land should have been included in the proposed development. The developer said later he stood a good chance of losing the whole development. He did not buy the extra land because the price was too high, he said.

Olafson's repeated attempts to convince council members they were taking the wrong course failed.

He accused them of accommodating "the big developer and turning down the small guy."

He said following the meeting he did not know whether he would oppose rezoning for the high-rise development at the public hearing June 10, even though he has favored it this far.

He also criticized developer John Mace, who spoke against a rezoning application for a bank across the street.

Olafson said he "just can't accept" one developer opposing another's attempts to build across the street. Asked by Olafson if his high-rise and mall shopping centre at Menzies and Simcoe was to include a bank, Mace said it did.

"You are assuming that you are going to get your zoning on the 10th of June," Olafson said.

Council turned down an application by a developer to rezone five lots on Market Street. The developer, representing Krieger, Stricker and Co. Ltd., said following the meeting that he did not buy two further lots because the owners wanted $45,000 each, while the others were obtained for between $32,000 and $34,000.

Ald. Clyde Savage and Robert Baird said they thought all the lots should be rezoned, but Olafson said any further rezoning should be applied for in the normal way. To refuse the rezoning might mean the developer would lose the whole business transaction, he said.

"HE SHOOTS — HE POURS!" might have been the cry of anguish heard on the Woodward's parking lot Thursday night as two area fire departments tangled in what could be called Soggy Ball, part of Victorian Days celebrations. Six-man teams from Saanich and the Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt departments used jets from their hoses to try and drive monster beach ball into opposition's goal. A wet time was had by all, including some spectators. The CFB boys edged Saanich but it's worth noting the referee and organizer, assistant chief Vern Edwards, is from their department.

Gonorrhea Jump Not Felt Here

The venereal disease clinic operated by the Greater Victoria health board has not encountered the jump in gonorrhea cases reported by a health officer in Nanaimo Thursday.

Dr. Peter Reynolds, medical director of the Central Vancouver Island health unit based in Nanaimo, reported gonorrhea cases were up 43 per cent in the first five months of this year compared with the same period a year ago.

He said the health unit appears to be faced with an epidemic.

In Victoria, Dr. Stanley Argue, in charge of the metro VD clinic, said he didn't have the figures immediately available but he thought the local incidence of gonorrhea much the same as it had been recently.

CLINIC BUSIER

Statistics released earlier this year showed the clinic was a good deal busier last year than in 1969 and there was a substantial increase in confirmed cases of syphilis and gonorrhea.

In 1970 the clinic conducted 1,270 consultations and confirmed 260 cases. In 1969 the comparable figures were 382 and 148.

Asked about a new type of gonorrhea which has been reported in California, Dr. Argue said there is no problem with it in Victoria.

The new strain is stubbornly resistant to conventional treatment and has aggravated an already "rampant epidemic" of venereal disease in California, public health officers there have reported.

Argue said he believes the new type was brought back by servicemen from Vietnam.

Sidney to Vote On Alderman

Polls will be open between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. Saturday at Sidney municipal hall in the byelection to fill the aldermanic vacancy created by the resignation of Hubert Perry.

Voters will choose between Chris Andersen, Bernard Ethier, Dudley Johnson, Alfred Knudsen, John Pedlow or Fred Robinson. Successful candidate will complete the remaining 19 months of Perry's term.

Harassed Non-Status Indians Establish Victoria Local

By ROBIN BURGESS

An organization designed to help non-status Indians trapped between two cultures because of circumstances of birth or marriage is establishing a local in Victoria.

Bob Stevenson, one of six field workers for the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians (ANSI), is in Victoria this week contacting local non-status Indians, discussing some of their problems with them, and helping to organize an association chapter here.

Stevenson is familiar with problems facing non-status Indians. He is a Metis, the son of a white father and Indian mother.

●

Children of mixed Indian-white parentage, Indian women who marry white men, or Indian people who voluntarily leave the reserves to try to make it in the white world are trapped at the bottom — shorn of rights as Indians yet subject to the prejudice of white society, said Stevenson.

"We're the people who have no rights."

"Indians have a hell of a fight with the Indian Affairs department but at least they have a place to turn."

Status Indians are provided with free education on and off reserve housing and medical service.

Non-status Indians have none of these rights.

●

They do have the same rights as white people in white society, but because of lack of education, in many cases, and unfamiliarity with white culture, they haven't had the same opportunities, he said.

Of an estimated 60,000 non-status Indians in B.C., 90 per cent are on welfare; compared to 38 per cent of registered Indians in B.C.

Also, non-status Indians make up 70 per cent of the inmates in B.C.'s prisons.

ANSI, operated solely by non-status Indians, is trying to do something about this situation.

The organization, which has been struggling along for about two years, received a $40,000 boost in the arm from the secretary of state department in January.

"People say, you're just creating another ethnic group.

Six full-time field workers have helped establish 54 locals throughout B.C. with a total membership of about 20,000.

"We're not going to sit back and wait for people to fall into government patterns. We'll make our own patterns."

One of the main purposes of the association is to give non-status Indians a sense of identity.

Many non-status Indians, said Stevenson, pass as white and do everything they can to conceal their Indian ancestry.

●

"We want to give them a reason to identify as one of us."

Instead of looking on their mixed blood as a handicap the association is trying to show non-status Indians that they have the advantage of unique insight into both cultures.

Campbell McDonald, a Victoria non-status Indian is proud of his Indian blood.

Of those who aren't he says, "I just think they're being unfair to themselves and their ancestors."

"When I'm driving taxi and someone gets in who's a little dark I'll ask him, 'Are you a non-status Indian'?"

There will be an organizational meeting of the Victoria local of the B.C. Association for Non-Status Indians, Sunday, at 2 p.m. at 496 Strange St. For further information phone Campbell McDonald at 479-6166.

Ethnic Program at Square

Songs, music and dances from far-off countries will change Centennial Square into a miniature United Nations Saturday when the city's ethnic groups present a varied program from 2 to 4 p.m.

Beginning with songs by a Polish choir, as well as national dances, there will be a Philippine dove dance, a German children's choir, Hungarian dances, a musical group of sitar, thubla and banjo; a German harmony choir, a Norwegian instrumentalist solo, a Philippine pole dance, an East Indian song, a Norwegian peewee dance, a Philippine bench dance, an Italian instrumentalist solo, an East Indian dance and the final number, a song sung to the accompaniment of a sitar.

arthur mayse

OCCASIONALLY IN MY travels through this district or that, I spot a large green or brown-painted bin in some householders' yard. Each of these containers indicates by its presence that a group of neighbors is taking direct action against a problem of our times.

This is the atrocious daily waste of metal and fibre, glass, bone and fat — materials that a society aware of the drain on earth's resources should be reclaiming for further use.

Those are recycling bins. What goes into them isn't garbage or junk, although it might appear so to the uninitiated. Marketed and processed, it will be returned to use.

There are now 15 such bins in Greater Victoria locations, with more to come. For that fact, credit some other neighbors in the Gonzales Bay area who decided a few months ago to do something about waste.

They had an idea, planted and vigorously fostered by Mrs. Barbara G. Corry, a lab assistant in University of Victoria biology department.

Much that is disposed of as garbage could be recycled. So why not large boxes in which people willing to do a little sorting and ferrying could deposit reclaimable materials?

Gonzales Bay Recycling Group set to work on a spare-time, unpaid project which continues to go very well.

Its bins are wooden packing cases donated by several Victoria firms which receive their outsized wares in these solidly-planked boxes. Volunteer truckers drop them off to be recycled — a job usually done in some member's home drive.

Compartments are installed. One is for paper products, one for bottles and tins. Into the third, which is fitted with lidded five-gallon cans, go fat and bones.

A hinged top and a paint job, and the bin is ready for delivery to a resident willing to give it yard-room. It then becomes a neighborhood depository for usable wastes.

"This isn't a garbage collection service," Mrs. Corry said. "I'd like to stress that point. Householders are expected to separate their garbage, flattening cans and cartons, before dumping it in a bin."

The custodian of a bin "borrows a truck or station wagon or something" and takes his load to a temporary depot at 175 Robertson Street each Saturday morning. There the contents are rechecked — a job for which more volunteers are needed.

"Then" says Mrs. Corry, "we get in touch with a friendly trucker, of whom we have several on our list, and he delivers the waste to the right market."

The Gonzales group has located buyers for its take, including the glass, which goes to a Vancouver firm for recycling. Only newsprint (one minor use for which I told you about on Thursday) still lacks a market.

Even on the not-yet-arrived day when the returns exceed expenses, the group will continue to function on a non-profit basis. Any surplus earnings will be donated to worthwhile community agencies.

"Our long-term approach is to bring about a changed attitude toward waste," Mrs. Corry told me. "We hope eventually to see the city or the regional board take over."

The regional board, she added, is undertaking a two-year survey into the recycling of solid wastes, and regards the Gonzales Bay undertaking as a pilot project.

In other areas, the idea translated into action by a few neighbors has attracted favorable attention.

Victoria City, friendly from the beginning, hopes soon to come up with a vacant downtown building for a central headquarters. Also, the group has been awarded a Federal "opportunity for youth" grant. The amount has yet to be announced.

The chief need today is for more volunteers who share the conviction that 'waste not, want not' isn't a mouthful of empty words.

Anybody interested in helping is asked to call the Environment 100 office at Civic 477-8415, for further information.

Full Economic Treaty With Russia Looms

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

LENINGRAD — A full-fledged treaty on economic development, technological and industrial cooperation between Russia and Canada may be forthcoming.

A joint communique issued after Prime Minister Trudeau had left the Soviet Union for Ottawa revealed both are running hard to reach further milestones of co-operation in record time.

And Trudeau today joined with the Russians in calling for a reduction of armed forces in central Europe and also sided with the Soviet plan for a European security conference.

Similar to One With Finland

Leading the list of new links projected by the communique for earnest discussion in the weeks and months ahead is the Russian treaty proposal, similar to the one Moscow has with Finland.

"The Canadian side agreed to study the proposal," the communique said.

The two governments also have agreed to work together more in developing the Arctic region and declared they both "have special responsibilities and corresponding rights of ensuring safe navigation and preservation of the ecology in the Arctic Ocean.

The communique also ranged over a number of international problems with both sides supporting a "properly prepared conference on European security" to include Canada and the United States. Both sides placed themselves on record as supporting a reduction of armed forces in central Europe.

Communique 'Plain-Spoken'

By co-incidence, the seven-page communique was hammered out in this city which Peter the Great built as Czarist Russia's "Window of the West."

An unusually plain-spoken communique by cold war standards, most of the tough details were worked out by under-secretary of state for external affairs A. E. Ritchie and Russia's deputy foreign minister S. P. Kosyrev. An even stronger version was sought by the Soviets but the Canadian side insisted on moderating some of the full-some language they sought.

The communique was to be tabled in the Commons this morning and announced simultaneously in Moscow, while Trudeau's armed forces jetliner was nearing the Canadian coast.

It referred to the "hearty welcome" shown Trudeau and his wife everywhere he went while logging 15,000 miles inside Russia since his arrival 11 days ago and said the atmosphere of "frankness and cordiality — in his talks with Kremlin leaders had led to the protocol they signed unexpectedly last week" to enlarge and deepen consultations." on a periodic basis at the government, commercial, scientific, cultural and tourist levels.

Safeguards Universal Peace

"They are convinced that the further development of good neighborly relations corresponds to the national interests of the peoples of Canada and the Soviet Union and promotes the relaxation of international tension and the safeguarding of universal peace," the joint statement said.

But it also included news of further developments since the protocol signing:

● Russia's proposal for a treaty on economic, technological and industrial co-operation which would go much further than the agreement signed by industry, trade and commerce minister Pepin in Moscow four months ago providing for co-operation in exchanging industrial applications of science and technology.

● Instructions to bureaucrats have been given by both to figure out the mechanics of "further developing trade relations between the two countries" and begin re-negotiating current trade arrangements this November or December in Moscow.

● Instructions to the experts to study ways of "further expanding co-operation in the field of air transport" which sources indicated would involve improvements in the present twice-weekly Aeroflot and

READY for federal-provincial meeting in Victoria June 14 is Justice Minister John Turner who returned to Ottawa today after three days of talks in London on methods of amending the British North America Act.

House Bypassed, Says Opposition

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Conservative party today presented a motion to censure the government for not bringing before Parliament the Canada-Russia protocol signed in Moscow by Prime Minister Trudeau.

The prime minister and his wife returned to Ottawa this morning from his 11-day tour and immediately went to Parliament to report on his visit.

However, debate on the censure motion was the first item of business today.

Conservative foreign affairs spokesman Heath Macquarrie attacked the prime minister as the "number one tourist of the year."

Macquarrie said there is no doubt Trudeau wants to escape national problems by travelling abroad.

Trudeau, in his report, said he has no naive beliefs that the protocol will produce a relationship consisting solely of "sweetness and tender feelings."

The censure motion reads: "This House regrets the refusal of the government to bring before the House for consideration and decision the U.S.S.R.-Canada protocol in order that all aspects of the relationship can be considered before implementation."

LIQUOR PRICES UP TUESDAY?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun says most liquor and beer prices will be increased Tuesday by the provincial government.

The newspaper says it has learned that the price for a 12-bottle case of beer will increase 20 cents to $2.70 and the price for the average rye whisky will go up 40 cents from $4.80. Scotch whiskys will go down 5 cents in price from an average $6.20. Vodka and gin prices will be increased by 25 cents.

Asked about price increase rumors, Attorney-General Peterson replied:

"I haven't any comment to make on that subject today."

He didn't specify when he might have any comment.

MILK PRICES UP 2c

VANCOUVER (CP) — Increases in the price of milk were announced today by Dairyland, which has about half the milk market in B.C.

Effective Monday, home-delivered price for one quart will go up two cents from 36 to 38 cents for different grades.

The price for two-quart containers will go up three cents from 68 to 71 cents and for three-quart sizes, up two cents from 95 to 97 cents.

Dairyland said the price to stores will go up four cents on the three-quart size, three cents on the two-quart and two cents on the one-quart size.

Causeway to Be Jammed For Swiftsure Eve Party

By PAT DUFOUR

The massing of the largest Swiftsure fleet in history — 191 boats — and a variety of onshore activities will make the Inner Harbor the pivot of events this evening with a record crowd of thousands jammed along the Causeway.

Pre-race fever will burn to a pitch at 8:15 p.m., as Humphrey Golby, Mr. Swiftsure, reels off the rollcall of boats and the competitors hail back with horns, ship's bells and anything else on hand.

The band and guard of the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps will perform a Sunset Ceremony on the legislative lawns, dressed in white tropical uniforms. Their field-gun crew will add a little extra fillip to the proceedings.

When the rollcall is over — about 9:15 p.m. — there will be a Victorian Days costume parade along the Causeway.

PARADE OPEN

The parade is open to everyone and will offer first and second-place prizes for the best-dressed man, woman, couple, children under 12 years of age, girls under 12, and boys under 12.

The race itself, which begins off Brotchie Ledge Saturday with the Swiftsure boats getting their start gun at 9:30 a.m. and the Juan de Fuca racers starting 15 minutes later, is expected to be one of the best recorded.

Winds will be light at the start, building up to westerlies between 10 and 15 knots as the boats head up the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The action is expected to quicken as squally conditions develop in the afternoon, working up to westerlies ranging from 25 to 30 knots.

Onshore watchers can expect a colorful finale as the boats head back to the finish line at the Breakwater Sunday. Pushed home by the westerlies, the armada will be flying a multi-colored host of spinnakers.

Heavy traffic in the Strait of Juan de Fuca and the possibility of fog patches Saturday will add a hazard of their own.

Frank Piddington of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, who is race chairman for the fourth consecutive year, warns that the competitors should be on the alert for boats.

PRICE CONTROLS 'EMERGENCY ONLY'

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Edgar Benson indicated in the Commons today that only in a state of emergency would the federal government impose mandatory wage and price controls.

Benson was asked if emergency controls were necessary would they be distributed to the provinces and tabled in the house. Benson said if an emergency dictates their use they would not be announced in advance.

Socreds 'Attack' Unions, Youth

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — New Democrat Party leader Dave Barrett today attacked the Social Credit government for creating a campaign of "hate and hostility" among British Columbians.

In a speech to the NDP convention at the University of British Columbia's Totem Park convention centre Barrett said the Socreds stay in power by dividing provincial citizens. He said the government has attacked teachers, unions, and recently, working people and professional groups as troublemakers.

Then he singled out Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi as the government member who has launched the most recent hostility campaign.

"That minister has now deliberately taken on the youth of this country and specially the youth of this province."

This is the government's latest response to unemployment, Barrett said. Instead of Gas Dumped

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — The U.S. army has confirmed that it dumped some 848 tons of poison gas into the Bering Sea nearly 24 hours ago about 276 miles northwest of Amchitka at which a five-megaton nuclear blast is scheduled this fall.

CORONA FAMILY JUST CAN'T BELIEVE . . .

'Monster' Mass Slayer or Model Husband?

By GEORGE LARDNER

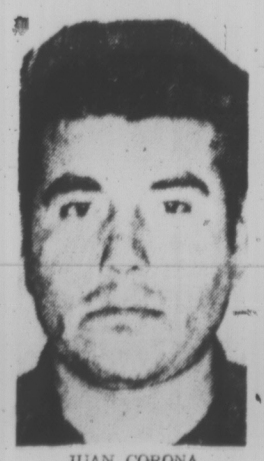
YUBA CITY, Calif. (WP) — Gloria Corona was still stunned by the predawn raid that tumbled her family out of bed and her husband into jail Wednesday morning.

Now she was alone; among friends, but alone. And Juan Vallejo Corona, the man she had married 12 years ago, the father of her four young daughters, was locked up on charges of mass murder suspected of killing at least 20 men and burying them along the banks of the Feather River here.

"My little girl, Marta, woke up because they were putting flashlights in all the rooms," Mrs. Corona recalled. "The police gave Juan a warning . . . about his rights. But he was shocked. He was in his underclothes. He couldn't understand."

Deputies from the Sutter County sheriff's office, one of them armed with a carbine, began reading out some of the accusations against her husband, Mrs. Corona said. But, she said, they failed to make an impression. Although Corona moved here from the Mexican town of Autlan Jalisco about 15 years ago, he is not yet fluent in English.

"He said maybe his daughter could read it all out for him," Mrs. Corona said, tears swelling up in her eyes. Fortunately, friends around her added, the officers told Corona that that would not be appropriate.



JUAN CORONA
. . . he doesn't understand

A short woman with a round face and deep brown eyes, Gloria Corona spoke rapidly in Spanish, her words translated by a friend, Frank Vega, and an interpreter that two newsmen had brought along in hopes of interviewing her briefly. They found her at a farm labor camp just north of town that is run by one of her husband's seven brothers, Pedro Corona, 35. It was close to midnight Wednesday night, but Mrs. Corona wasn't sleepy. Nor had she eaten all day.

FAMILY MAN

To Pedro Corona, his older brother is a good family man, a good Catholic, "the best brother I have because he takes care of my mother, sends her more money than anybody else."

MURDER TOLL 20

YUBA CITY, Calif. (CP) — Eight more bodies of murder victims have been dug up in fruit orchards near here, bringing to 20 the number found along the Feather River, law enforcement officers said.

The latest discoveries made this the largest multiple murder case in modern American history.

Isolated in a Yuba City jail and charged with the murders is Juan V. Corona, 37, of Yuba City, who spent three months in a state mental hospital in 1956.

There still was no apparent motive for the macabre slayings.

12' VINYL-SEATED RESORT BOAT

Beamy enough for active, two-man casting. Roomy enough for all their tackle and gear. Comfortable, chair-high seats covered in scuff-proof, weather-proof vinyl. All metal transom that motor clamps can't wear away. Low-maintenance salt-safe aluminum, stem to stern. Positive flotation. This is the fisherman's fishing boat, all the way. And she's just one of nineteen MIRRO-Craft models, all styles and options.

Pay Plea 'Truly Regal Chcek'

LONDON (CP) — A left-wing weekly edited by a royal adviser says Queen Elizabeth has "truly regal cheek" in asking Parliament for a raise in pay.

The charge is contained in a front-page editorial entitled Royal Tax Avoiders carried in the respected weekly The New Statesman.

A spokesman for the newspaper said Thursday that the editorial was written mainly by Richard Crossman, a former Labor party cabinet minister who is a member of the Privy Council, a group of distinguished Britons who act as advisers to the queen.

The editorial accuses the queen of "trying to get it both ways, pressured, to judge by his ill-judged public utterance on this subject, by the Duke of Edinburgh."

The attack caused an immediate stir almost everywhere in Britain except at Buckingham Palace, where a royal spokesman said a copy of the weekly had not yet been received.

The queen has petitioned Parliament for an increase in her $1.14 million annual allowance, a sum unchanged since she became queen in 1952.

The editorial objects on the ground that the request ignores the fact that the Queen has immense private wealth and is able to increase that wealth through tax privileges unavailable to ordinary millionaires.
